THE WORLD IS IN THE METROPOLITAN EAST ORANGE

To everything there is a season and a time to every purpose. A time to work, to study, to grind the wheel in the quest of that ever distant thing called knowledge. To do, to join, to be part of a group that is willing to act not only for its own good, but for the good of a greater, nobler idea. To hope, to fight, to cheer for a victory when defeat seems inevitable. To slow to relax, to be yourself when you reach the limit of your mind's burden. The way to be successful is to act, or time will be wasted, life will pass on, an unseen parade.

Time—the omnipresent, ever ticking judge of all things past, present, and future. It is the healer that erases even the deepest of deep memories which saddle the spirit of mankind. It begins in the indefinite past, and ends in the darkened depths of our imaginations, traveling from nowhere to forever—in the end, making all things right.

Time is, in itself, timeless. There was time before us, and, in all likelihood, there will be time from now into the far distant future. If this is really so, what difference does it make if we spend our lives sunk deep in the mire of oblivion?

It makes no difference at all, for who can truthfully say where we're going, or know for sure from whence we've come? But there is an obligation which rests heavily upon our generation, as it has on all generations past, and will for all generations to come. So long as time is timeless and the future eminent, the obligation of continuity, of living from the past to the future, will be the fare of mankind. This is the challenge of being in the present.

Board of Education

Robert H. Seitzer, M.S., Superintendent of Schools.

In America, formal education is usually considered a right and not a privilege. One must remain in school until state law allows him to leave. Since we are required to be involved with education for at least sixteen years, it is necessary that the educational system be as meaningful as possible.

This is the Board of Education's purpose. They back the school system and keep it running smoothly and efficiently. The decisions made by the Board, concerning all problems of education, are always in the best interest of the city's large student body. Adequate facilities are assured us and well trained faculties with modernized teaching methods are possible for us because of the Board's existence.

The members are specialists in their field — education, and nothing is too much for its promotion.

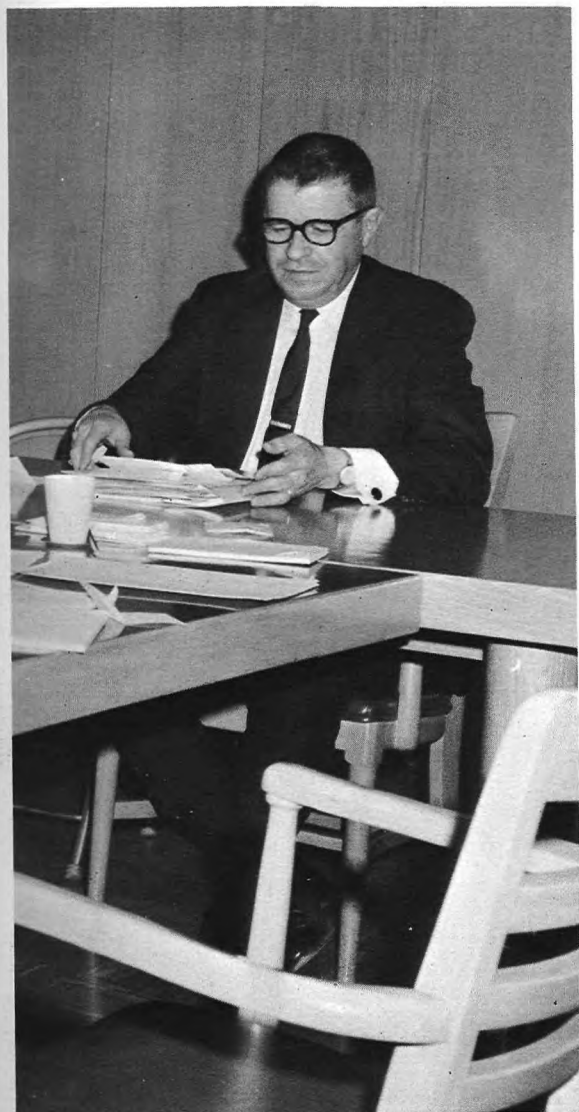

W. George Hayward, Ed.D.
Assistant Superintendent of Schools

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Seated: Mrs. Mildred Barry, Scott Harris, Maurice N. Trainer. Standing: Patrick J. McLoughlin, Winifred S. Gideon, III.

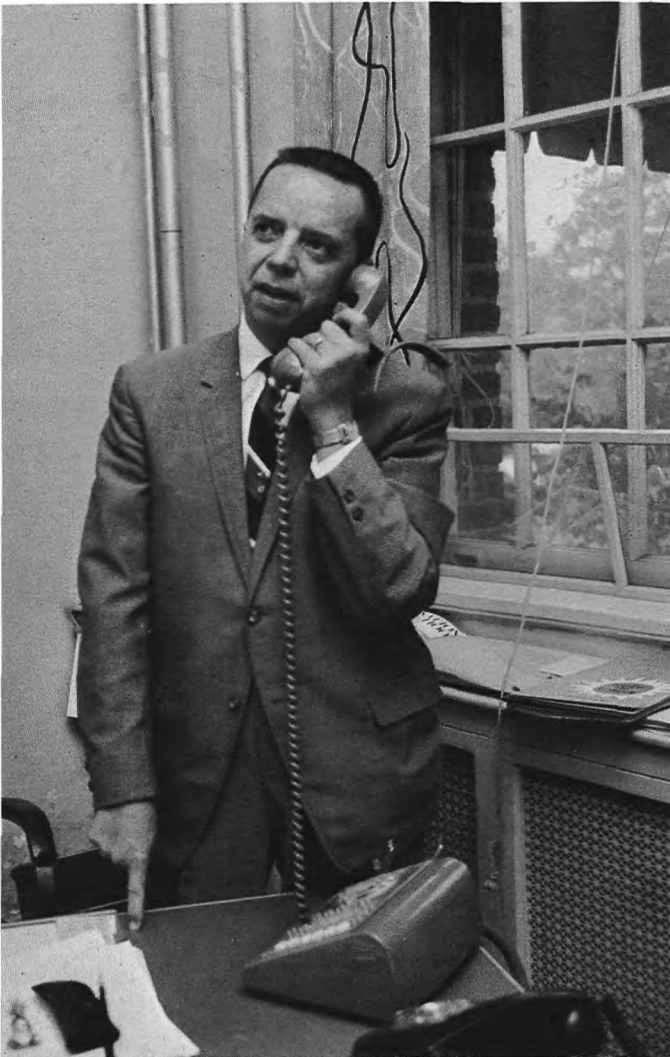

A Tuesday afternoon Board meeting — it will probably end late Tuesday night.

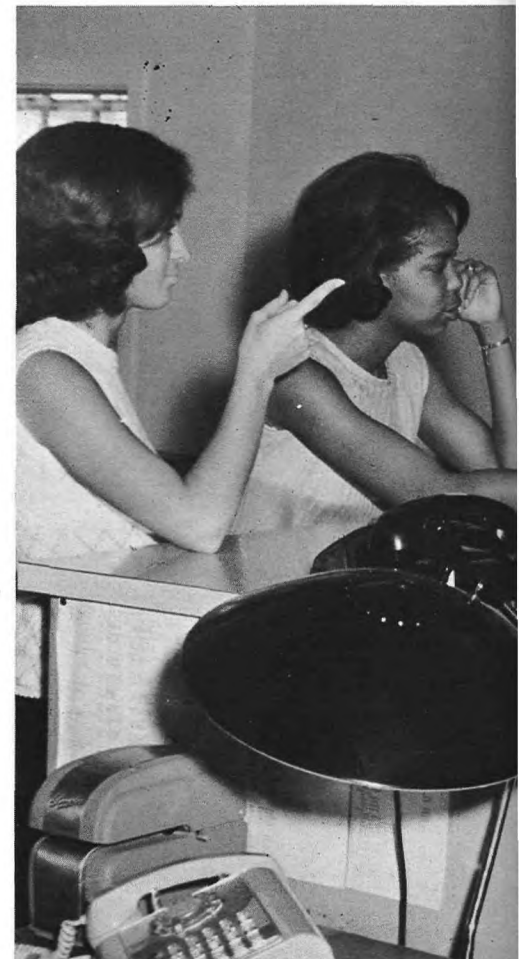

Administration

A tri-handed "grip" firmly holds the structure of our high school together. Without this "grip," the structure would slacken and eventually fall, leaving us with a totally ineffectual educational system.

East Orange High School has been said to be the student's second home. Every home needs supervision, and should function harmoniously. The larger the family — here, the high school — the more difficult the job of supervision, and the more improbable the case of complete harmony. Our principal and his assistants must depend upon compromise and good judgment in deciding what must always be in the best interest of the student and faculty body as a whole, and also, for the student and faculty as individuals.

Morgan T. Loesch, M.A., Principal; "I want one hamburger, rare, with onions . . ."

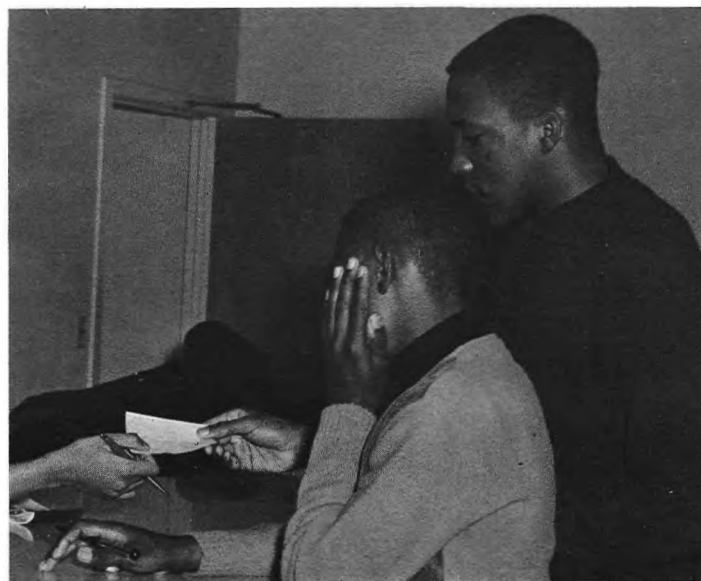

Harold K. Smith, M.Ed., Assistant Principal; "Well, I'd say it tastes a little bit like uh . . ."

George A. Swoyer, M.S. in Ed., Assistant Principal; Administration is a difficult business . . . A stern mien is required to hold errands in line.

Aline A. Archambault, A.M.; "Your grades are going to be very important to you in another two years."

Richard S. Klein, M.A.; "I'm only here to help you."

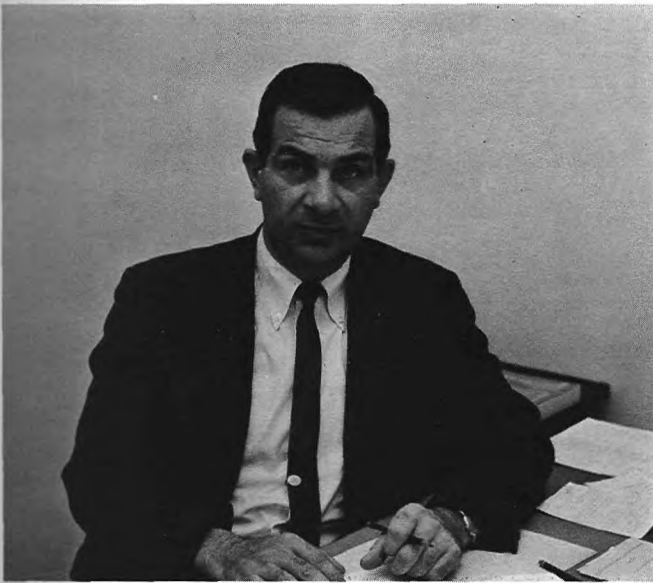

"As the twig is bent, so grows the tree." In an age dominated by psycho-analysis, guidance means much more than friendly advice and constructive criticism. Each guidance counselor must get to know each one of his students as personally as possible. In order to make this possible, a new system of student distribution among East Orange High's nine counselors has been put into effect. Each is assigned a group from a segment of the alphabet. Post high school plans for seniors and high school problems and situations concerning underclassmen compose an extremely full schedule for our vital guidance department.

Medical

Mrs. Gilroy checks over the medical records.

A bruised finger, a slight fever, or a stomach ache certainly do not require the attention of expert nurses and doctors. Yet, the medical department deals primarily with cases of this sort. What makes this department so essential then, is not the medical treatments but rather the comforting understanding which the staff can give to these minor maladies.

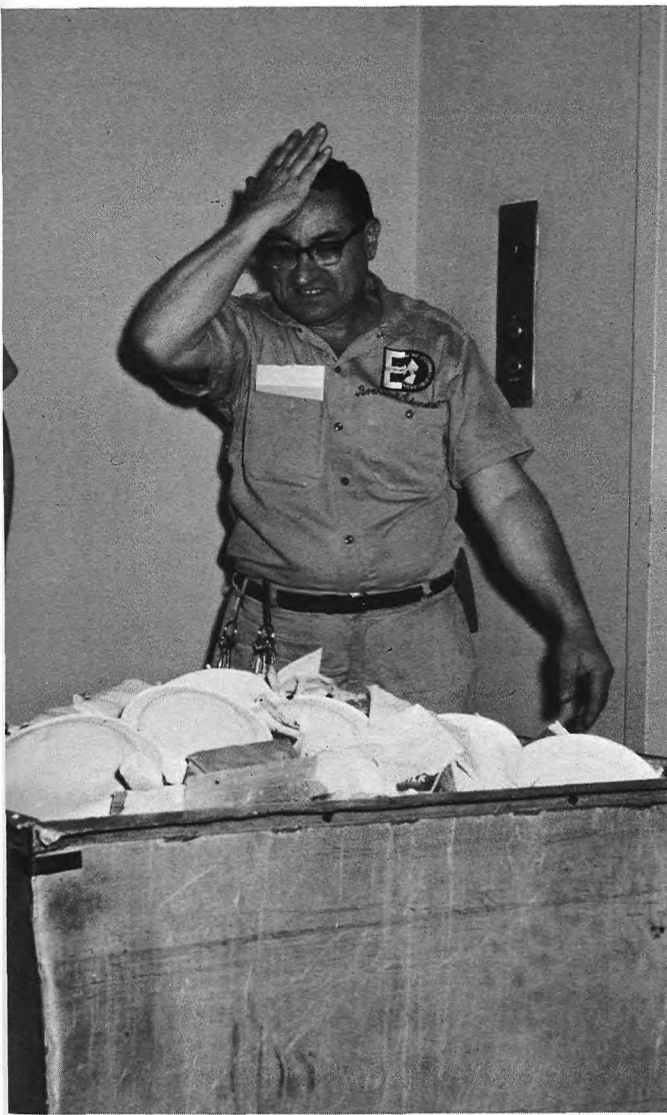

"Well, it's back to carrots and celery!"

Mrs. Gilroy checks a student's ears.

Staff

They come early and leave late, performing all the necessary little tasks which keep a school of two thousand students in smooth running order. The mounds of paper work are handled by the secretaries, the food is ably prepared by the cafeteria staff, and the custodians keep the school and its grounds neat and clean. The student body owes a great debt of gratitude to these people who spend their time serving us.

From the halls?

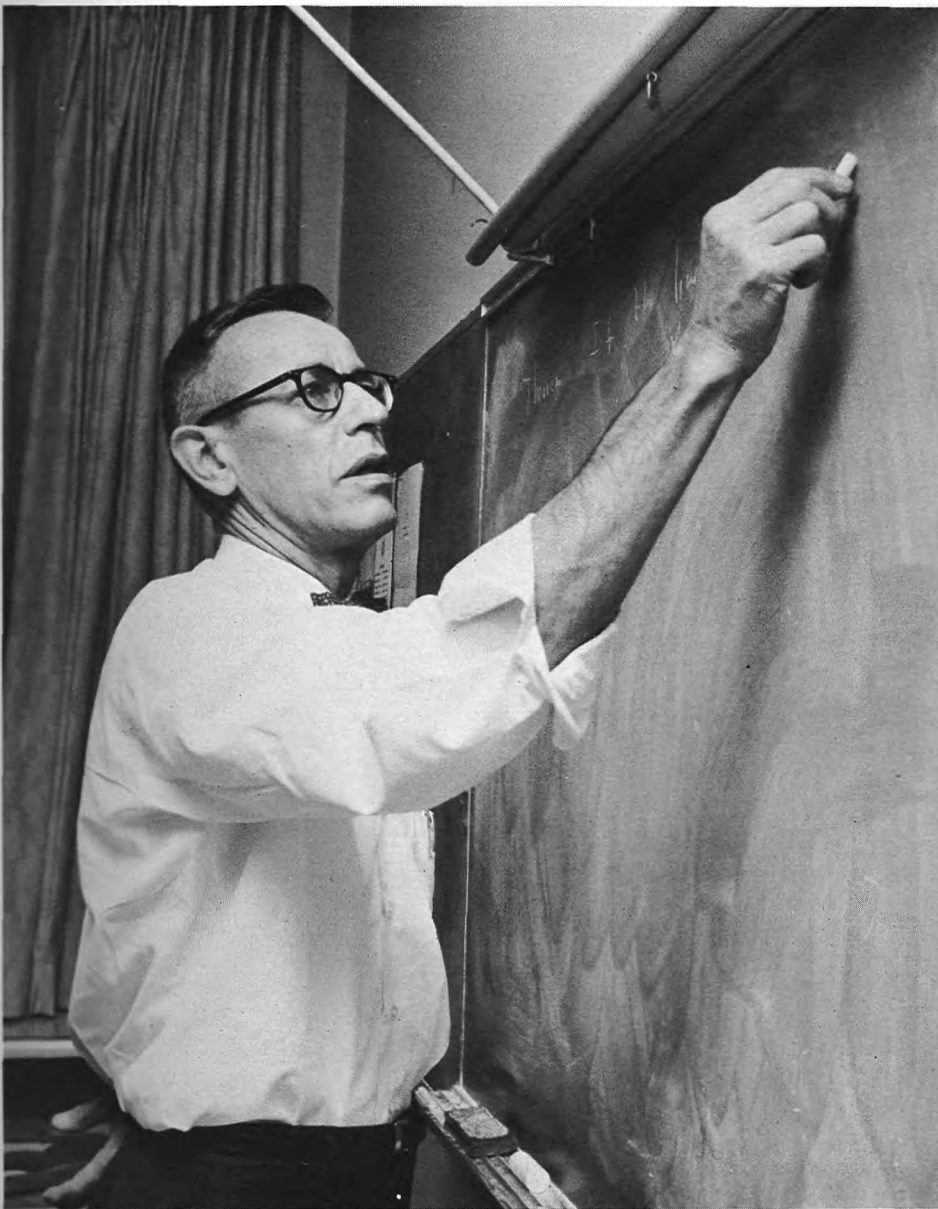

"A little paint will fool 'em."

She holds the answer to any question.

CURRICULUM

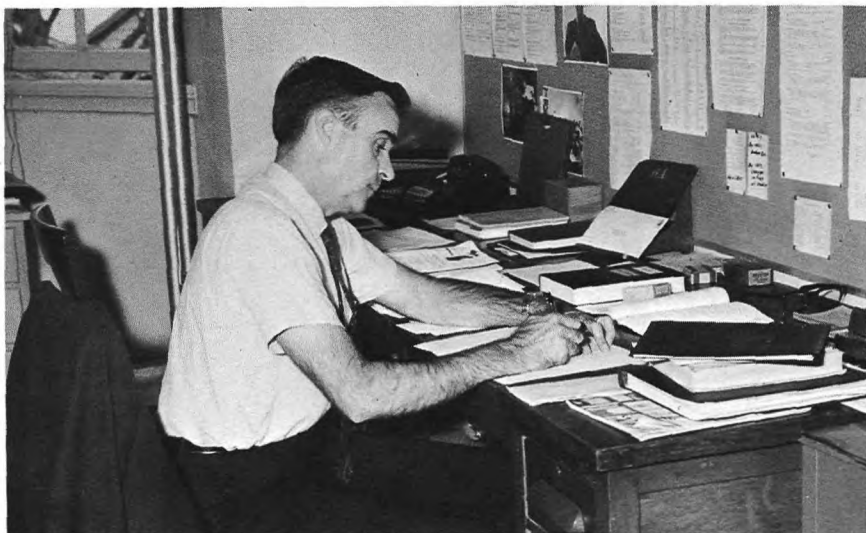

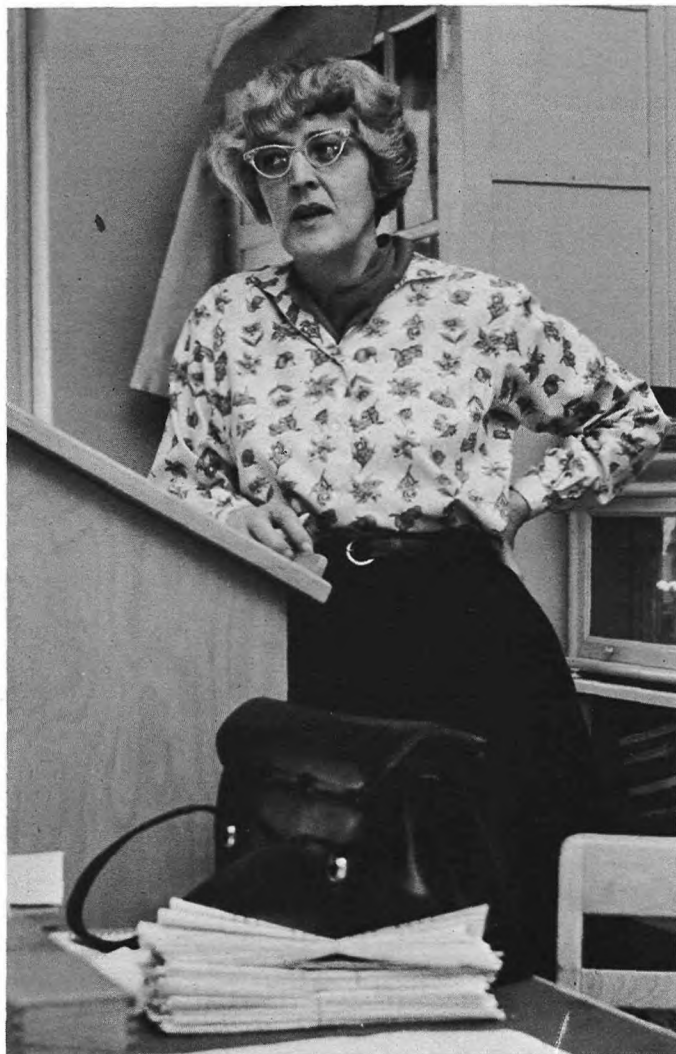

A time to study — The idea that man, through his own initiative, can learn of the world around him, and teach others about it — The fact that he, as a result of thousands of years of concentrated work, has left a complete record of his activities from the dawn of time, so that we, today, can understand the actions and thoughts of our predecessors— The realization that our society, our culture, has been built through the thoughts and dreams of men, both past and present, and has endured all the trials that man can establish for himself — All, all a tribute to the genius of man, and his learnings. It is our duty, the purpose of our life's journey, to further our knowledge. This can only be achieved by our continued striving towards our unseen goal: To seek, to learn, to achieve.

ENGLISH

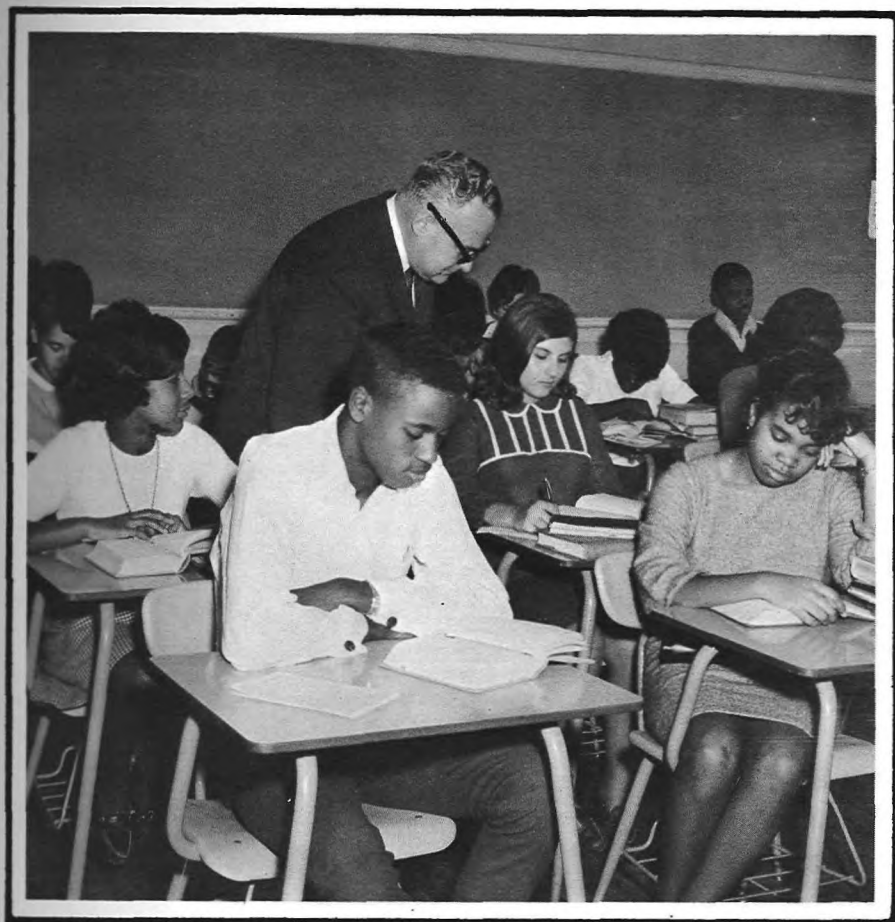

The written word is the bridge of communication by which man expresses thoughts, feelings, and moods. Man's greatest thoughts are handed down from generation to generation through words. Our entire intellectual heritage is based upon records of what other men have thought and believed.

The English Department serves a two fold purpose; to acquaint the student with his literary heritage and the use of his language. Through instruction of American and English Literature, mythology, and poetry the student sees how literature has affected humanity both past and present. Being able to effectively use the English language in reading and writing is of much importance in today's world. It is to this end that a complete study of English grammar is undertaken. The skills of usage are being continually strengthened by the writing of various themes and compositions.

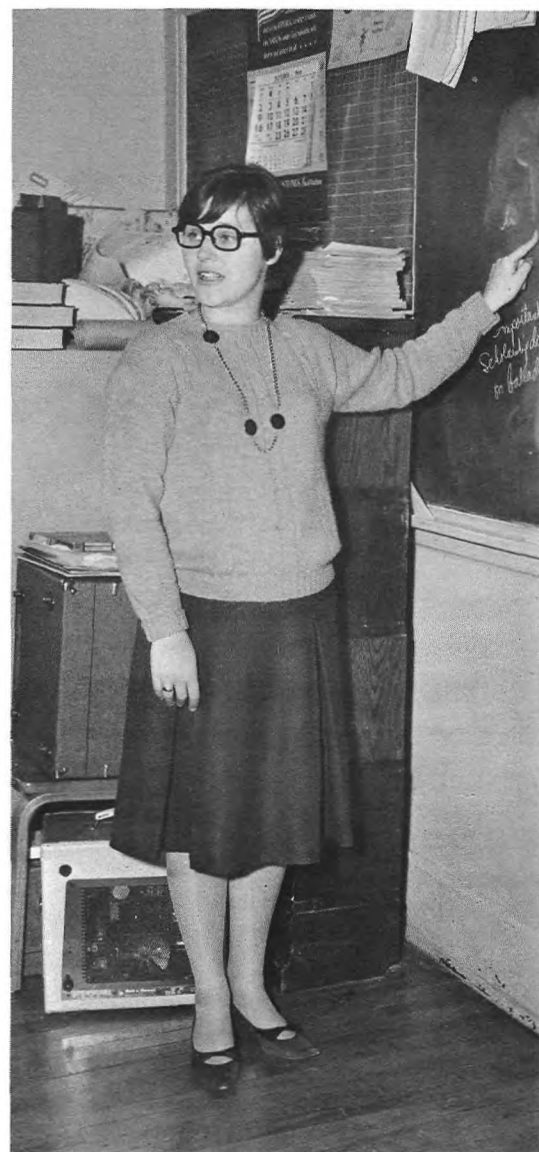

In our daily lives the written and spoken word forms the basis of our society. The ability to express oneself both verbally and orally is of paramount importance in every field of human endeavor.

A Challenge to the Mind

READING

Man's most important form of communication is the written word. To be able to comprehend and interpret the ideas, emotions, and feelings of his fellow men, one must have a thorough knowledge of the thoughts of the entire family of man, past and present, at one's fingertips.

A writer has something of importance to convey, and it is imperative that the reader be able to make sense of and understand what is being communicated. For this reason, the art of reading must be mastered by all, and then these barriers of ignorance and unawareness will be torn down. Once mastered, reading becomes a challenge to the mind preparing it to cope with any and all experiences life has to offer.

The Essential Truth

Ruth E. Lindsay, M.A., Head; "The study of history is dependent on the ideas of individuals."

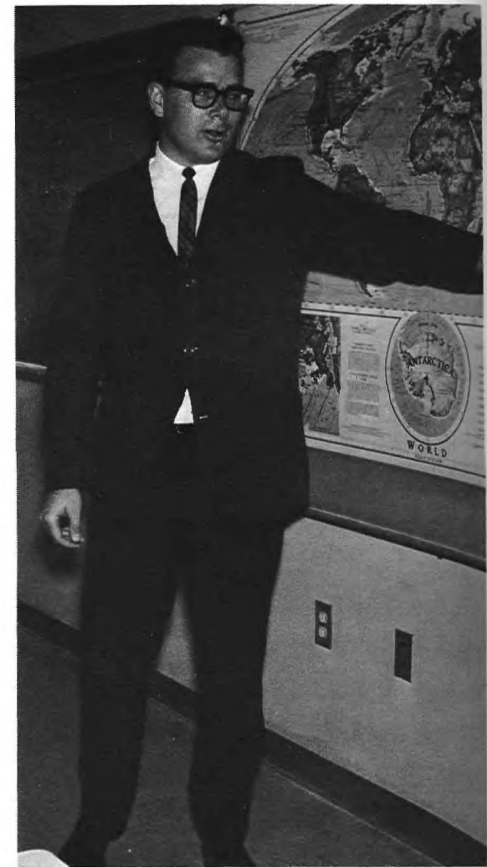

SOCIAL STUDIES

The Social Studies department brings the student closer to his own roots as an American and a citizen of the world. American History, World History, Civics-Geography, World Geography, and Modern Living offer a diversified program which covers, as nearly as possible every phase of history. New courses such as "Underdeveloped Areas of the Non-Western World" serve to bring this ideal even closer to reality.

The departmental staff is continually striving to make history a "real" thing. To do this the student has to be able to identify with historical events by seeing them on an individual level. A prime example of this is the participation in the study of government on the municipal, state, and national levels which is an essential part of the Social Studies program.

The Advanced Placement program, instituted three years ago, seeks to qualify select students for a year of college credit in American History. In this course the student sees the development of our nation through the eyes of historians, past and present. By analyzing the opinions of these men, they are able to formulate ideas of their own.

The goal of the Social Studies department is to show the student how to learn from the past so as to live for the future, but the only way to do this is to understand that it's the how and the why of things that really matter. The fact that events occur is insufficient in explanation of the trends of history. The development of man is too monumental a thing to merely say of it, "It just happened."

Audrey W. Middleton, M.A.; "You see, America is not always right."

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Our modern world is an ever growing place. New nations are emerging by the day, each bringing with it another language to be elevated to global importance. Communication is thus made even more difficult for those people who can speak but one language.

We, as Americans, are grossly unprepared to enter upon the world scene. Where approximately one-half of the Europeans speak two or more languages, less than one-twentieth of us do. The Foreign Languages Department seeks to change this. By offering courses in French, Spanish, German, Italian, Latin, Russian, Chinese, and Greek, the student is exposed to a large sampling of the major languages of the world, both past and present.

Recognizing the need to hear oneself speak, the Department has installed a language laboratory where the student can listen to tapes of himself or others. There is also special instruction available for anyone who feels that he needs personal help.

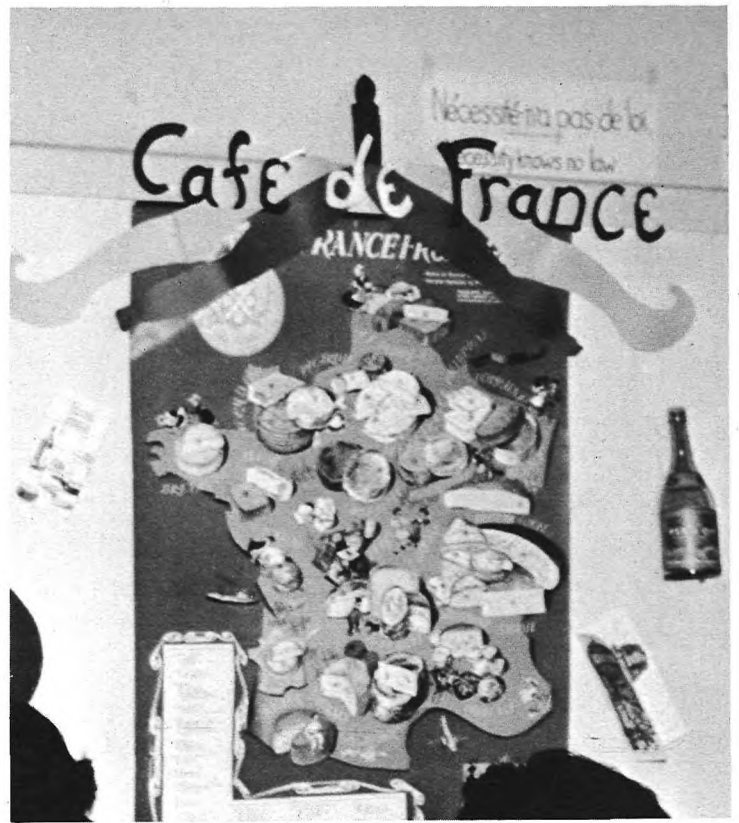

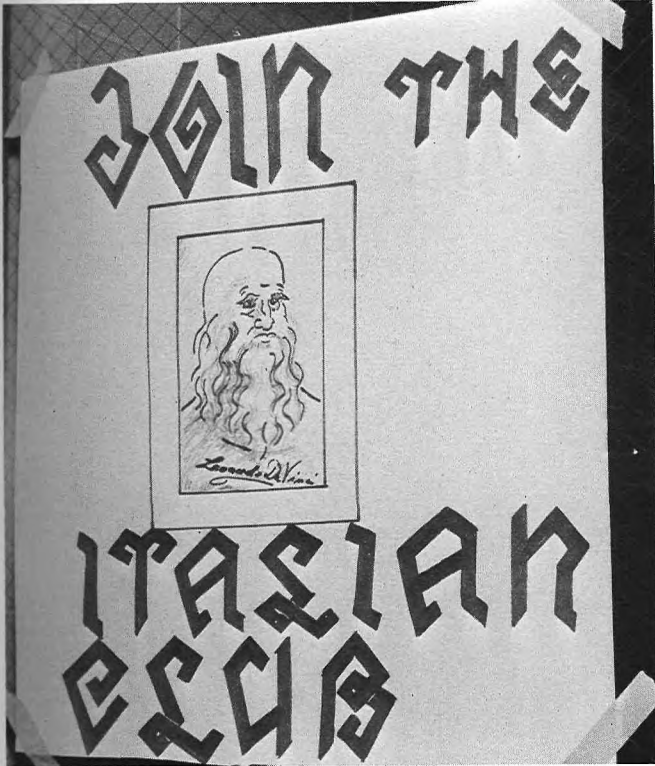

Someday, it is hoped, a majority of Americans will be bilingual. We will be able to meet the people of the world on their own individual levels; when this is finally achieved, the Foreign Languages Department will have achieved its goal.

The Road to the New Technology

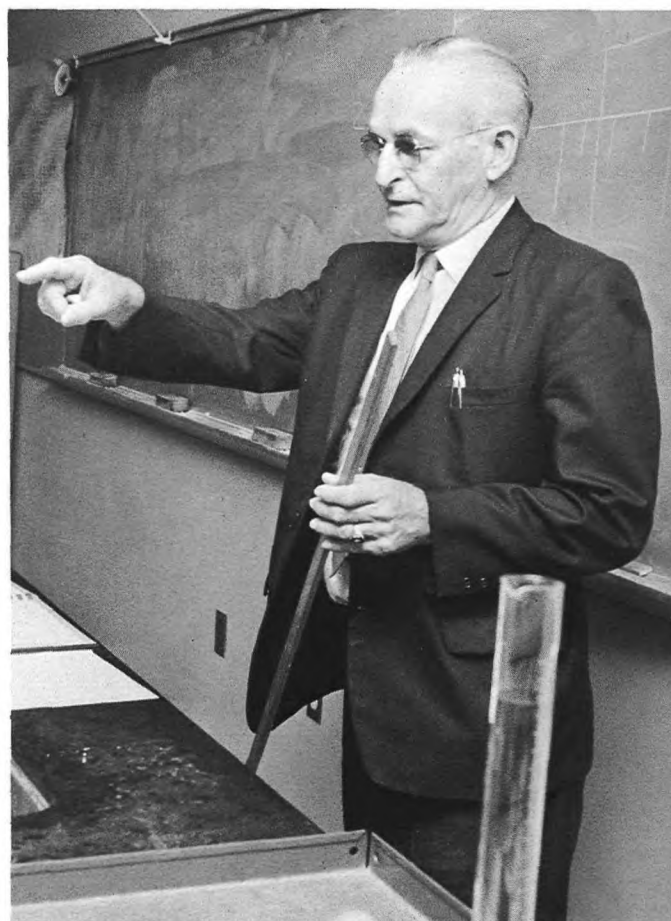

SCIENCE

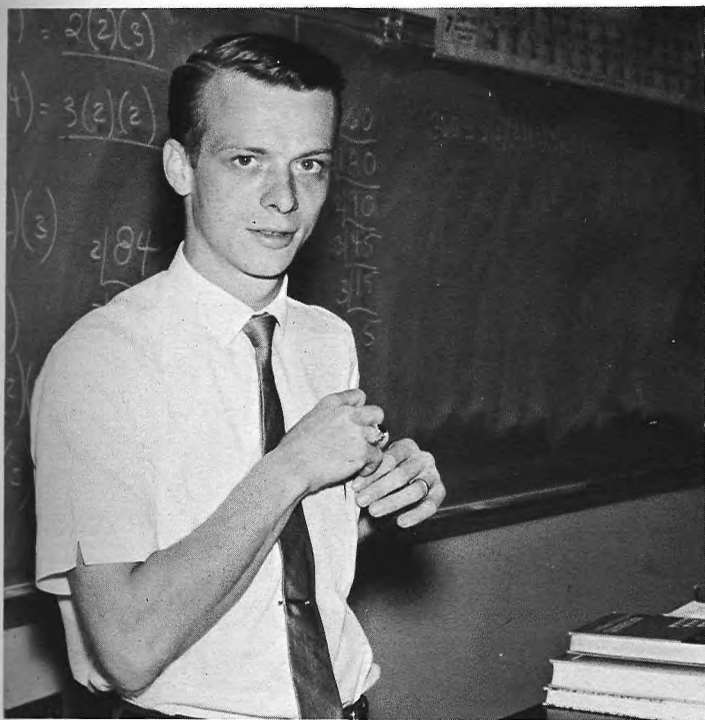

In today's technologically oriented society, science plays a vital role in everyone's life. The mind of the scientist is filled with questions. He wonders, he is inquisitive. He thinks logically within the framework of cause and effect. He will not accept a conclusion without first examining the basic premises.

The spirit of science is the search for knowledge through questioning and experimentation. To maintain this spirit the Science Department has introduced courses whose approach stresses student experimentation. These courses include the BSCS Biology program, PSSC Physics, and ChemStudy. These courses are primarily for the college bound student who wants a background for later work. Basic science classes emphasize the practical applications science has in our everyday life. Laboratory experiments supplement the textbook approach to give students an appreciation of the role technology plays in our society. Keeping pace with the times, the department has also started a course in Aerospace Education.

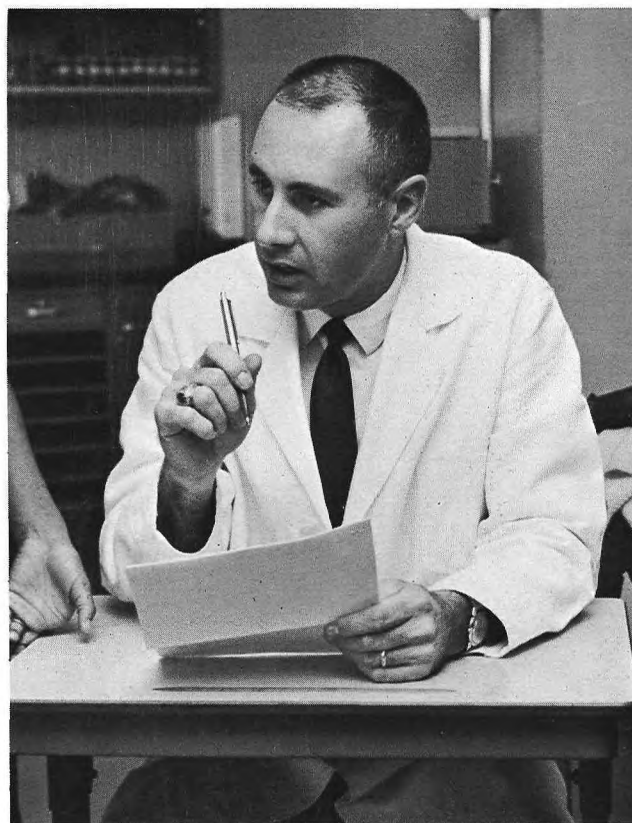

Although the student cannot expect to probe the depths of all sciences, it is possible to get a well-rounded view of the various fields and the discipline involved. The knowledge imparted to the student and the exercise in the use of abstract ideas prepare the individual for a fuller life, regardless of his plans.

MATHEMATICS

The Mathematics Department offers a wide range of courses designed to meet the needs of all the students. The general courses allow the high school student to gain a solid basis in mathematics without going on to a four-year college course. Although familiarity with mathematical operations is stressed, the course also gives the student a glimpse of other areas of math.

Students who plan to enter college may take advantage of a wide variety of courses. Beginning with algebra, the student progresses to geometry, trigonometry, and theory of equations. A special course in probability and statistics is also offered to interested juniors. In the senior year there is an honors course devoted to calculus. The course, which meets ten times a week, acquaints the student with such esoteric topics as integration and differentiation. For seniors who do not wish to take calculus, a comprehensive course is offered which includes an overall treatment of algebra, trigonometry, and calculus. College students can obtain a solid background in mathematics that will stand them in good stead.

Whatever the eventual plans of a student, the Math Department's flexibility offers courses that will aid that student in any chosen field.

The Complex Society

BUSINESS EDUCATION

In a complex society such as ours, built largely upon a balance of figures and technicalities, only the capable may be depended upon to maintain a strong but adaptable system.

Business Education helps prepare young men and women for a career in the business world as secretaries, accountants, clerks, and technicians. Modern equipment and contemporary business methods are employed to simulate real office situations and to facilitate the student's grasp with the problems of today's business world. Emphasizing proper dress and manners, the high standards of our Business Education Department continue to turn out many efficient young men and women into the vastly expanding fields of business and commerce.

Make a Joyful Sound

VOCAL MUSIC

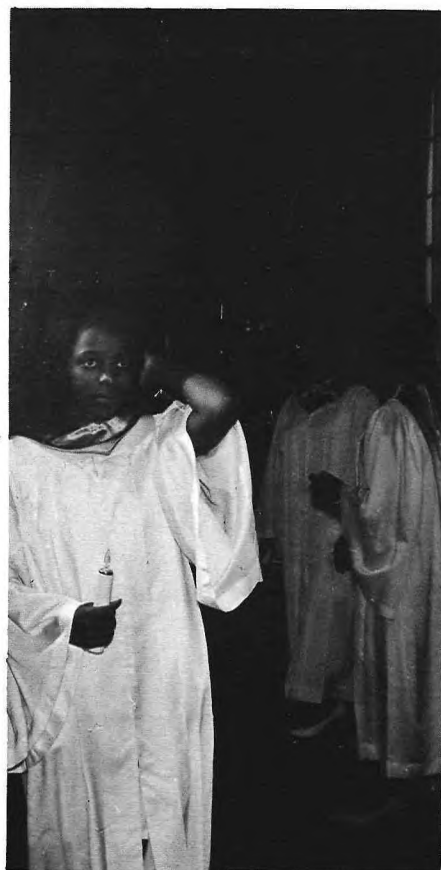

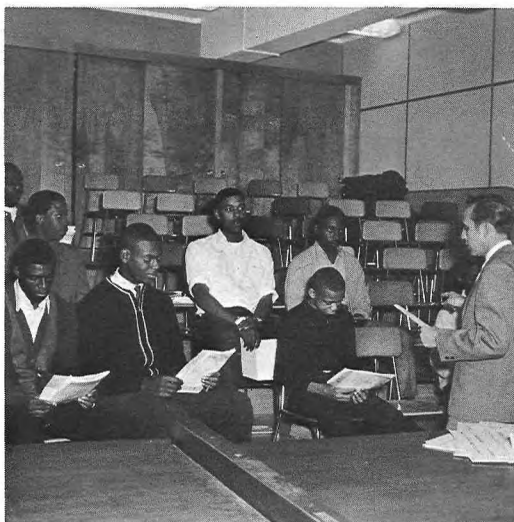

Man needs a way in which to release his inner emotions, to lift his spirits. Communication in the delicate tones of vocal music refreshes and stimulates all who may hear it. The blending of many beautiful voices into a concert results in a completely rewarding experience. This is what the Vocal Music Department, consisting of Mr. George Gilbert and Mrs. Elsie Davis, strives toward. Many types of choirs and ensembles unite twice yearly, at the peak of their musical endeavors, to present themselves to the school.

The annual Winter Concert brings the groups together for the first time. From the solemn processional with the strains of "At Solemn Midnight" till the last lingering note dies away, it is a memorable experience. The highlight of the concert is the honor solo, "O Holy Night," given each year to the senior who has shown outstanding talent and devotion to music. This Christmas, Elaine Ellsberry won the spotlight. The Spring Concert is equally as thrilling as the Winter Concert, when once again the voices of the school come together in song.

Each individual who enters this department has a chance to reach toward the highest goals — advancement to Girls' Vocal Ensemble or A Capella Choir. In the turquoise-carpeted music room, voices of all musical ranges blend so that others may have the pleasure of hearing a song well sung.

FINE ARTS

Creativity lies dormant in the soul of almost every human being, waiting for a chance for expression. The Fine Arts course taught here succeeds in recognizing and capturing the spirit of the individual. To appreciate the finer qualities of all art forms, one must be exposed to them. To this end, several exhibits have displayed the artistic talent of the school this year.

Study is not only limited to manual work in the various media. The student is encouraged to develop a keen sense of art appreciation and discrimination among the varied art forms of the world's cultures. He may become an art major, delving still deeper into this fascinating field, working up to the possibility of an art career.

Expanding its facilities rapidly to meet the needs of the student, Theatre Arts was introduced this year by the department. Here, the student learns the techniques and talents required to capture the dramatic feeling of a play in the set design. Through the devoted character of Miss Bonnie Meltzer, Mrs. Bernice Price, and Mrs. Dorothy Upham, the Fine Arts Department strives to turn out well-rounded individuals, aware of their capabilities.

The Homemakers of Tomorrow

HOME ECONOMICS

The ability to design a garment or concoct an appetizing meal is not a natural one, but is developed through practice and training. The Home Economics Department aids the student in this development, and points the way to a future as a successful homemaker.

For those with a talent for cooking and sewing, there is a Home Economics major. In this course the student is given a detailed instruction in the art of homemaking and is aided in developing the poise and confidence necessary for running an efficient household.

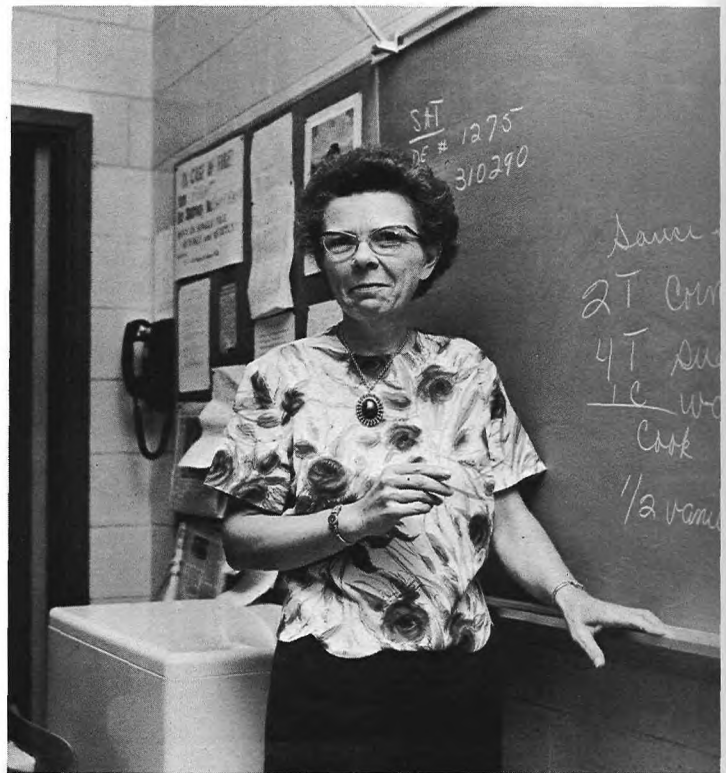

The industrialized world of today makes it mandatory for a girl to have some home-making ability, more than enough of which is given by our Home Economics Department.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

The Industrial Arts Department plays an extremely important part in forming those men who will plan our world of tomorrow. It develops hidden skills and provides excellent facilities for those who are creative. Time tested rules of building are conscientiously followed as original concepts take place first on paper and then dimensionally. Students with abilities undertake projects of mammoth size, designed to test their present skill and develop the talent they will need in the future. Those with any lack of ideas or problems in construction are helped by competent instructors. Industrial Arts serves as the bridge between those still dreaming of the feats of tomorrow and those forging ahead to achieve the conceivable today. The structure of society is only as strong as its foundation.

GIRLS' PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The term "physical fitness" suggests the male segment of our population only. No one who thinks could possibly be more mistaken, for "physical fitness" applies to the female also.

To avoid a future society of flabby, unhealthy, poor postured women, the girls' Physical Education Department decrees three periods a week of gym, plus several other courses in health education, for each and every high school girl, health permitting.

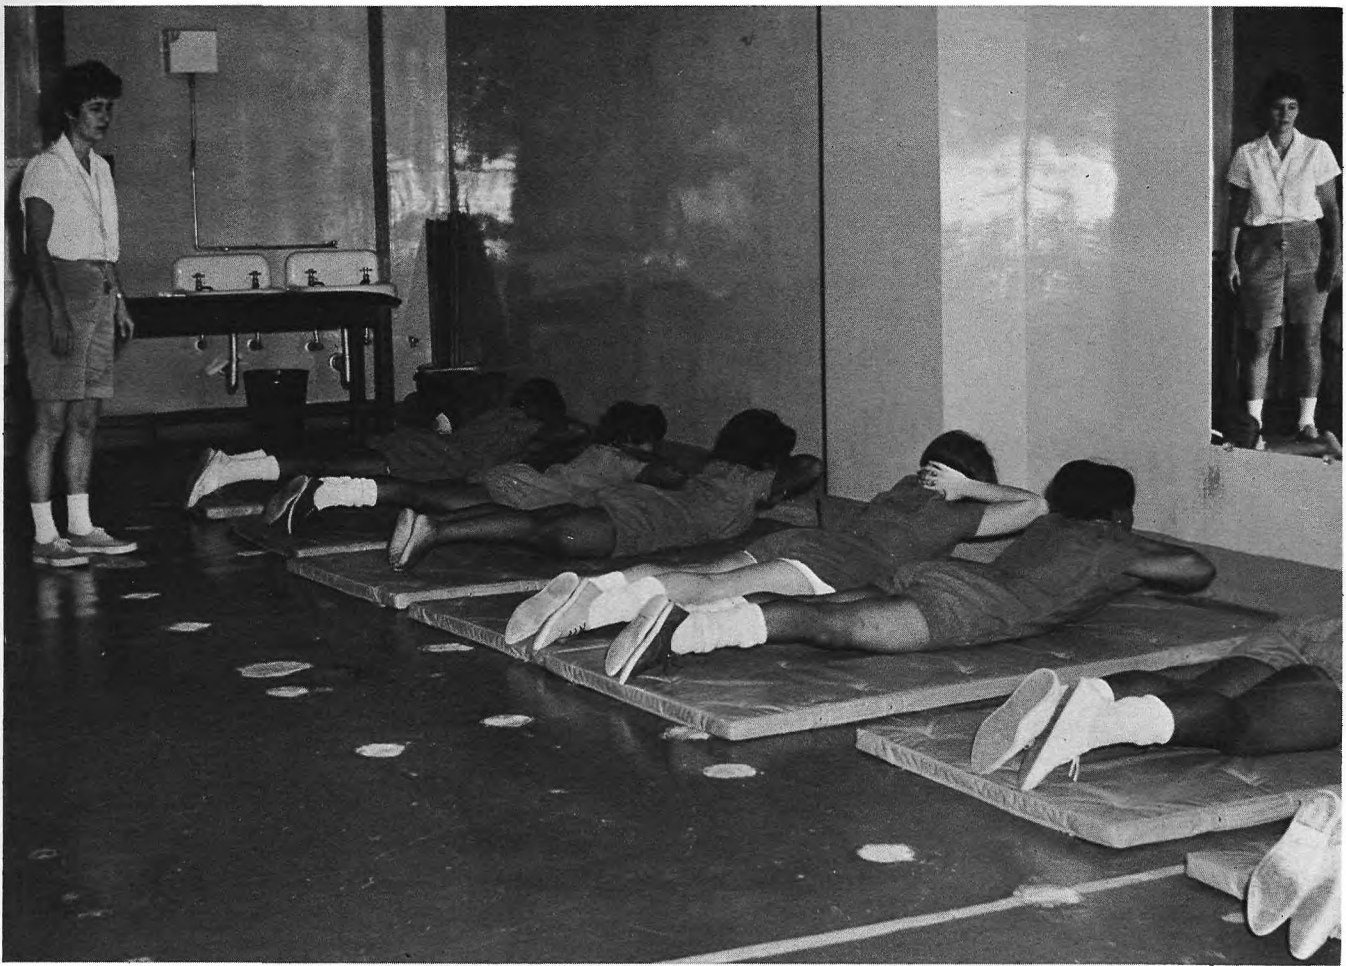

Proper habits of play are enforced and the basic skills of today's popular sports for women are introduced. The importance of being a well organized individual, physically, is stressed, because a healthy body leads to a healthy mind.

First Aid to others is taught in the health courses. Not only is personal health important, but the ability to help others attain and maintain the blessings of health are stressed.

A well rounded individual, both in society and in the home, is the most important facet of life. The girls' Physical Education Department is taking an important step in this direction.

BOYS' PHYSICAL EDUCATION

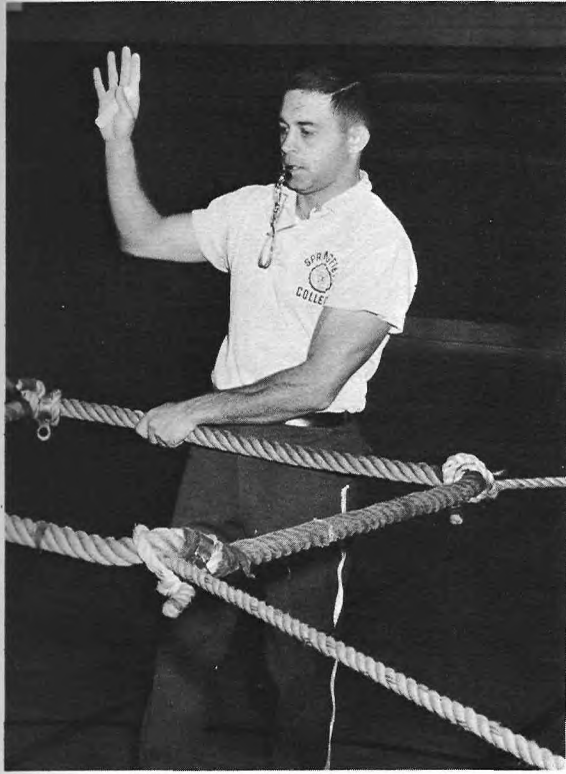

The Boys' Physical Education Department helps to develop skills and increase knowledge of competitive activities. The gym and health education classes seek to give as complete a background in the field of physical development as is possible.

The gym and intramural programs stress both individual and team participation in activities. Through them, the student gains timing, co-ordination, endurance, and skill, and maintains a high level of conditioning. The Health Education classes, in turn, teach the student about his health background, how to protect it, and what to protect it from.

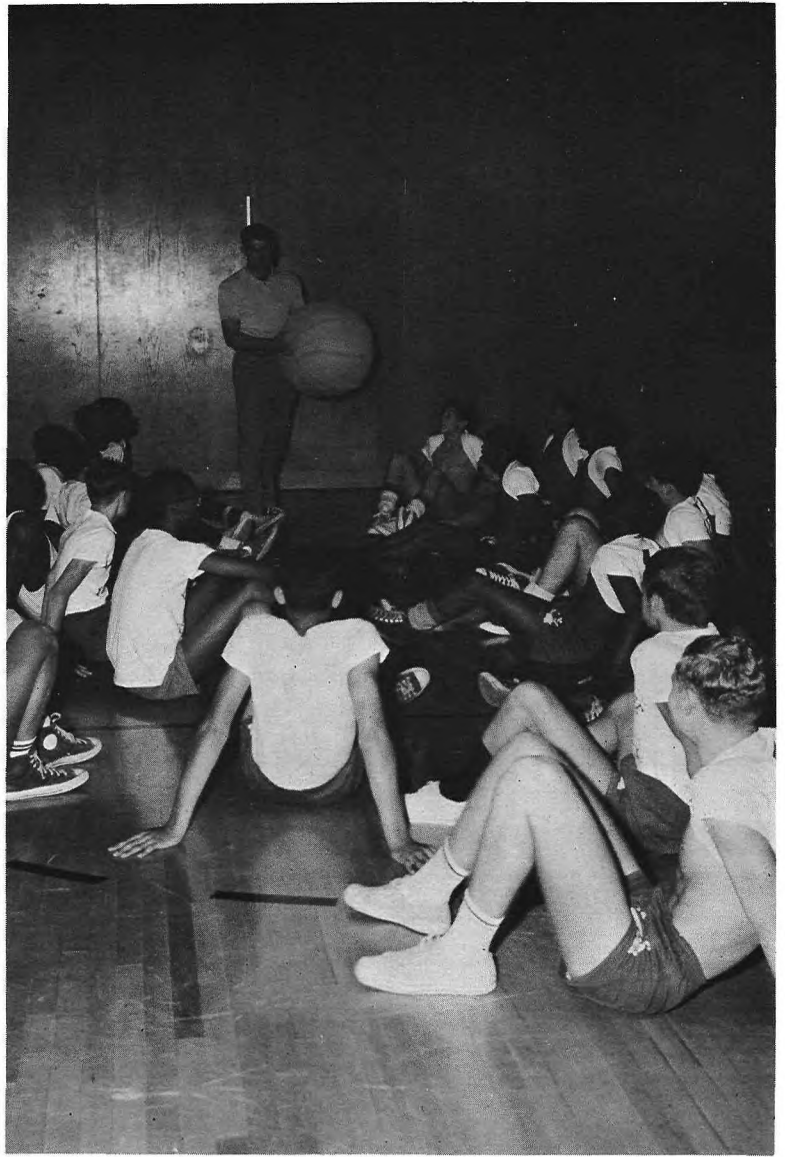

The Physical Education Department stresses teamwork, co-operation, and courtesy. By means of this program, they hope to produce well rounded individuals through physical development.

DRIVER EDUCATION

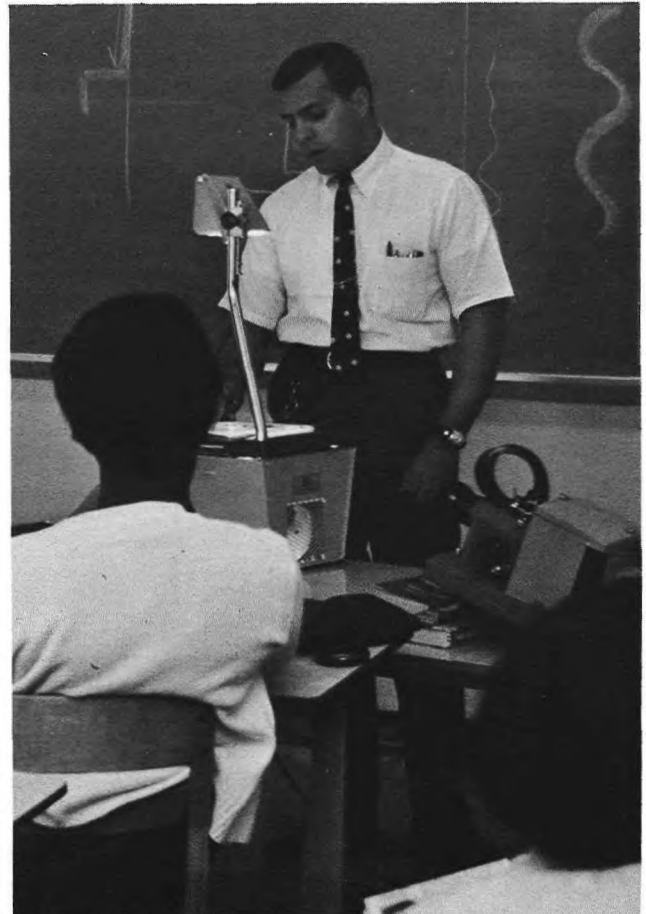

The East Orange High School Driver Education Department plays an important role in turning out safe, responsible drivers. Through a combined program of theoretical teaching and Behind-the-Wheel training, the department drills students in safety, precision, and awareness. The instructors make liberal use of films and psycho-physical testing devices so that the lessons will take on an air of reality. Finally, an actual driver instruction course is given where people are taken on the road and put into every day driving situations. On the whole, the classroom and road training program of the Driver Education Department produces safe qualified drivers for the nation's roadways.

The Knowledge of the Ages

LIBRARY

The knowledge of the ages at your fingertips; picture and print open up the thinking of men past and present, to say nothing of conjecture of the future. Problems, often complex, can be tentatively solved by just a turn of the page.

The constantly expanding physical plant combined with the competent administration of Mrs. Ruth Burwell and Mr. George Fabian give this school one of the finest libraries in the area; truly representative of the motto: to read is to learn, to learn is divine.

ACTIVITIES

The rush starts with the 2:50 bell. Students move as though caught in the current of some wild, uncontrollable river; the current leaving its human deposits in small groups, here and there. As three o'clock approaches, the torrent slows down till it is again an evenly flowing stream of people. These people then, not by will of some onnipotent crowd, but rather through their own choosing, go to the many rooms in the school in which there are extracurricular activities.

An extracurricular activity is just what it says, an activity which is beyond the curriculum. Under this category we find such groups as Buskin and Brush, the Dramatics Club; all the publications; the service clubs and office assistants; the band and its related marching units; and most important of all, the Student Council. These groups are all student organized and run. There are, of course, faculty advisors, but they tend to stay in the background as much as possible.

The availability of these activities is hardly worthwhile, however, if they are not taken advantage of. Anyone who says that he has nothing to do has only to look around one afternoon to be answered. If there is indeed a time for everything, it only remains for everyone to take advantage of it.

The inherent right of every group of people is self-government — the realization of basic social and intellectual aims. Formed for this purpose, the General Organization of East Orange High has been active in initiating many new and exciting programs under the able leadership of President Linda Baker.

Realizing the need for many East Orange students to learn about the Negro's relation to America, the Negro History Culture Club was formed, inspired by Negro History Week. To develop student interest in the facilities and ideas of such neighborhood schools as Clifford Scott, Barringer, Weequahic, West Orange, and Columbia, the Student Council inaugurated a student exchange program, whereby interested students could visit and examine these schools.

During the Christmas season, the Student Council conducted its annual drive—the filling of Christmas baskets to be distributed to the city's less fortunate.

Not forgetting the entertaining side of school life, the Student Council sponsored a Sweetheart Fashion Show for Valentine's Day, featuring male and female models from all classes. Among the Student Council dances was "Dog Patch, U.S.A.," a square dance at which the prevailing dress code included wranglers, sweatshirts, and sneakers.

Participation in the All-Essex County Student Council was another of the numerous goals the Student Council set before itself. Planned in May, Student Councils from the entire country got together to discuss mutual plans and ideas.

So this year, through helping individuals to recognize their leadership potentials, the Student Council officers and homeroom representatives have strived toward the ultimate goal, that of government by students — for the students, helping to make the student body a much more integral part of East Orange High.

Syllabus

A TIME TO CREATE

The 1967 Syllabus comes to you as a product of a multitude of different things. Many an after school hour was spent in discussion and decision. People, more than could possibly be named have given their time and energy to help publish this book for you.

The aim of the Syllabus is to show East Orange High School as it really is. Our school has many faces and it is the endeavor of the yearbook staff to present as many of these faces as is possible. The crowded halls, the noisy classrooms, the quiet batch of students studying for a rough exam, all must be represented if our picture of East Orange High School is to be complete.

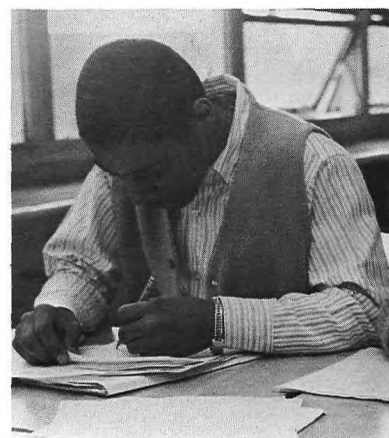

The activities of our school also bear mentioning. A whole new world opens up after 2:50, but only for those students who take advantage of it. It is a group of students like those who publish The News each month, who make Buskin and Brush productions come to life and who even make it possible for you to be reading this page at this moment. There are other things which are important, too. The Student Council, Echoes, the football team, and our assembly programs, all enjoyable and enlightening, are as much a part of school life as a six-hundred page United States History text.

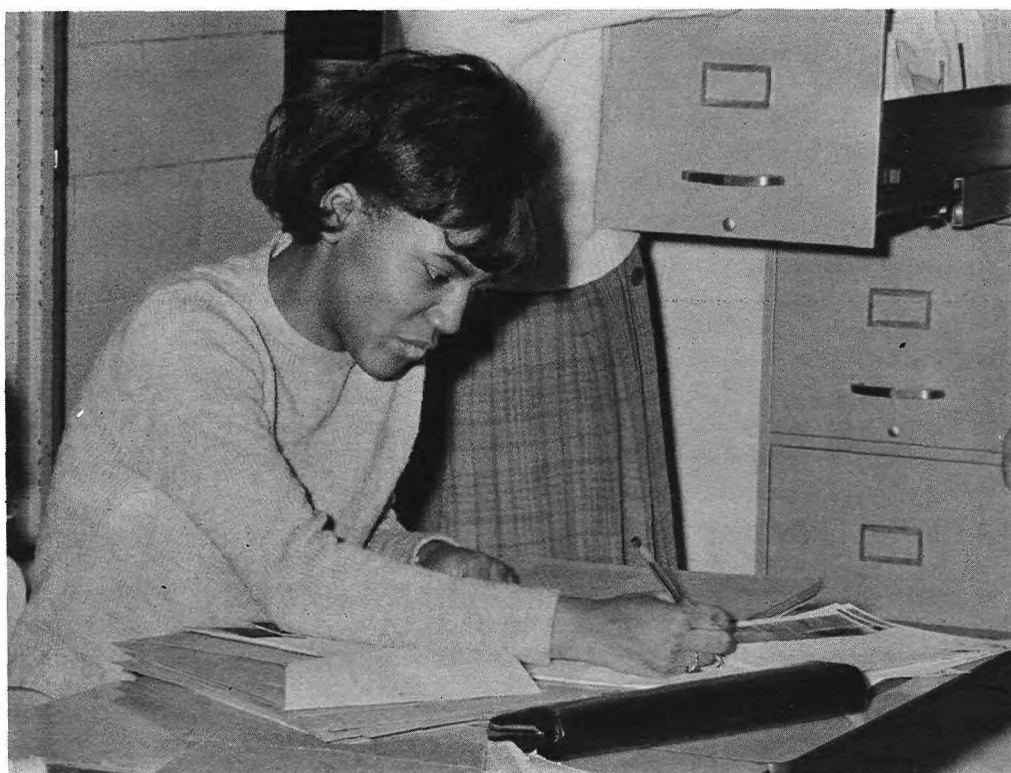

Advisor: Howard Wolverton, Jr.
Editor-in-Chief: David Heflich

To present this as a complete picture, it has been necessary to eliminate many older, binding traditions, which would be out of place in the finished product. These have been replaced by newer, more dynamic ideas, products of much well disciplined thought.

In closing there is but one thing left to do and that is to state the dedication of this book; and that is left to you, the reader, the student body of East Orange High School, 1967.

The News

Editor-in-Chief Linda Holmes

A well-informed majority is a necessity. On-the-spot reporting insures that every member of East Orange High will stay in touch with what is currently happening in the school.

One of the more active organizations of our school is the News staff, whose duty it is to report all to its readers. Reporters working on the News get to know East Orange very well; they learn how the city functions and also get to know many teachers, students, councilmen, and political figures. Upon receiving their assignments, the reporters go out in search of interviews, and one may see them as they go around the school trying to complete their assignments, sometimes staying as late as twelve or one in the morning.

The News gives an opportunity to those students interested in writing stories to do so, thus allowing them to become experienced in the world of journalism.

For the first time, Echoes will be represented at the Columbia Scholastic Press Conference where the magazine will be judged together with similar publications from other schools.

Audio-Visual Aids

Audio-Visual Aids performs a most necessary function in the daily academic routine of the school. The films, records, and the tapes which we enjoy in class can all be attributed to the job done by the A.V.A.

The responsibilities of the A.V.A., however, go beyond classroom work. The sound at dances, basketball games, and assembly programs amounts to many hours of work for them after the close of the school day.

These boys have coordinated their efforts to produce this pleasure and have shown, through their devotion, admirable character and leadership qualities.

National Honor Society

In the past few years the National Honor Society has consistently widened the scope of its activities, and this year's group is no exception. No longer just an honorary association, the society performs valuable services for the school. Members of the organization tutor students who have deficiencies in certain subjects.

The Honor Society will also hold its annual tea for foreign students, giving the student body and the students a chance to get to know one another better. The officers of the Society are quietly optimistic that East Orange High may be host to a foreign student for a full year in 1967. The final decision rests with the American Field Service, the agency through which the program is administered. The money, which was raised by the students in the Honor Society, would allow the student to live with a family in East Orange.

The National Honor Society continues to consist of students of high academic and civic accomplishment.

Buskin and Brush

An empty stage becomes a striking reality through the imagination of Buskin and Brush.

The essence of any production is to seek and develop the character. Buskin and Brush consists of the selected who are able to transform themselves to the features of the characters.

Time and eagerness are some of the most important elements of a production.

The presentation of a production starts with auditions, scripts, and schedules.

Blocking tells what express reaction and situations are intended for the actors and actresses. Many other aspects of a major production are directing, set design, and construction, make-up, costumes and lighting.

All build up the foundation and atmosphere which make this production a success.

Rehearsal starts for The Desperate Hours.

"Come on in and join us."

The lights dim. Murmurs of the audience cease and the heavy curtains part. The brilliant spotlight hits the actor in the middle of the stage, and the play begins.

What must the actor do at this tense moment; why is he there? The actor must be able to communicate with the critical audience, causing them to become totally involved and entangled in the play's plot.

Culminating weeks of hectic activity, the play is the product of the work of many backstage crews — props, costumes, make-up, lighting, publicity. Now, the actor represents all this and must communicate all the necessary emotions—passion, love, hate, fear, tenderness.

In the stark thriller, "The Desperate Hours," Joseph Hayes pits the love Dan Hilliard has for his family against the violent evil, hatred and hunger for revenge of three escaped convicts. An ordinary man in an ordinary job comes home and is thrust into a bizarre situation, in which he must make decisions affecting his family, his manhood, and his dignity.

An attempt at communicating different feelings is "Pygmalion." Is it possible to reverse your social position merely by changing your diction?

Higgins: "... Don't sit there crooning like a bilious pigeon."

Professor Henry Higgins takes a common flower girl with the worst possible Cockney accent, and after numerous speech lessons, he transforms her into a dainty lady—the talk of royal social circles.

Thus, this year, Buskin and Brush has strived to achieve bigger and better heights through the effect of drama.

Boys' and Girls' State is an exercise in government. Sponsored by the American Legion, this program brings over 1200 boys and girls to the Rutgers-Douglass Campuses in New Brunswick during the last week in June. Here, the students proceed to organize and govern themselves on city, county, and state levels. They elect their own officials and pass their own laws, as well as attend lectures on government, education, and other topics. The representatives are chosen by the faculty because of their outstanding scholarship and citizenship over the previous three years.

The camera is capable of freezing any degree of expression, be it beauty, wonderment, motion, or merely the intricacies of a construction. The patterns of light and dark, angles of vision, the framing of the picture, all tend to make photography an art. This art can only become reality if great care and skill are exercised in developing and printing. The club instructs the student in all these practices and gives him the opportunities to use them in the service of the school.

The marching squads of East Orange High School consist of a rare group of people. They are unselfish in that they give of their time tirelessly, foregoing their other interests to promote school spirit; and they show integrity in that they uphold the social image without qualms of being unsophisticated.

These qualities have led to the formation of well rounded students, who, through their sacrifices, have shown their feelings for their school.

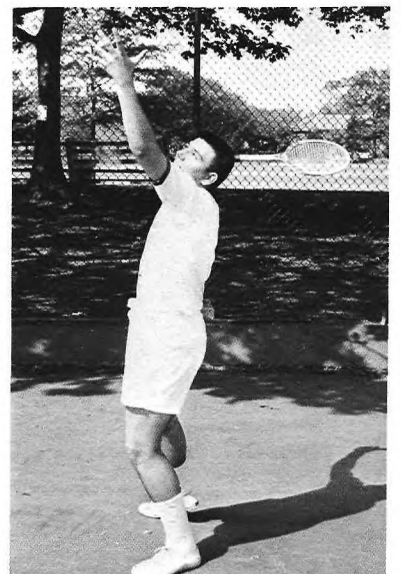

ATHLETICS

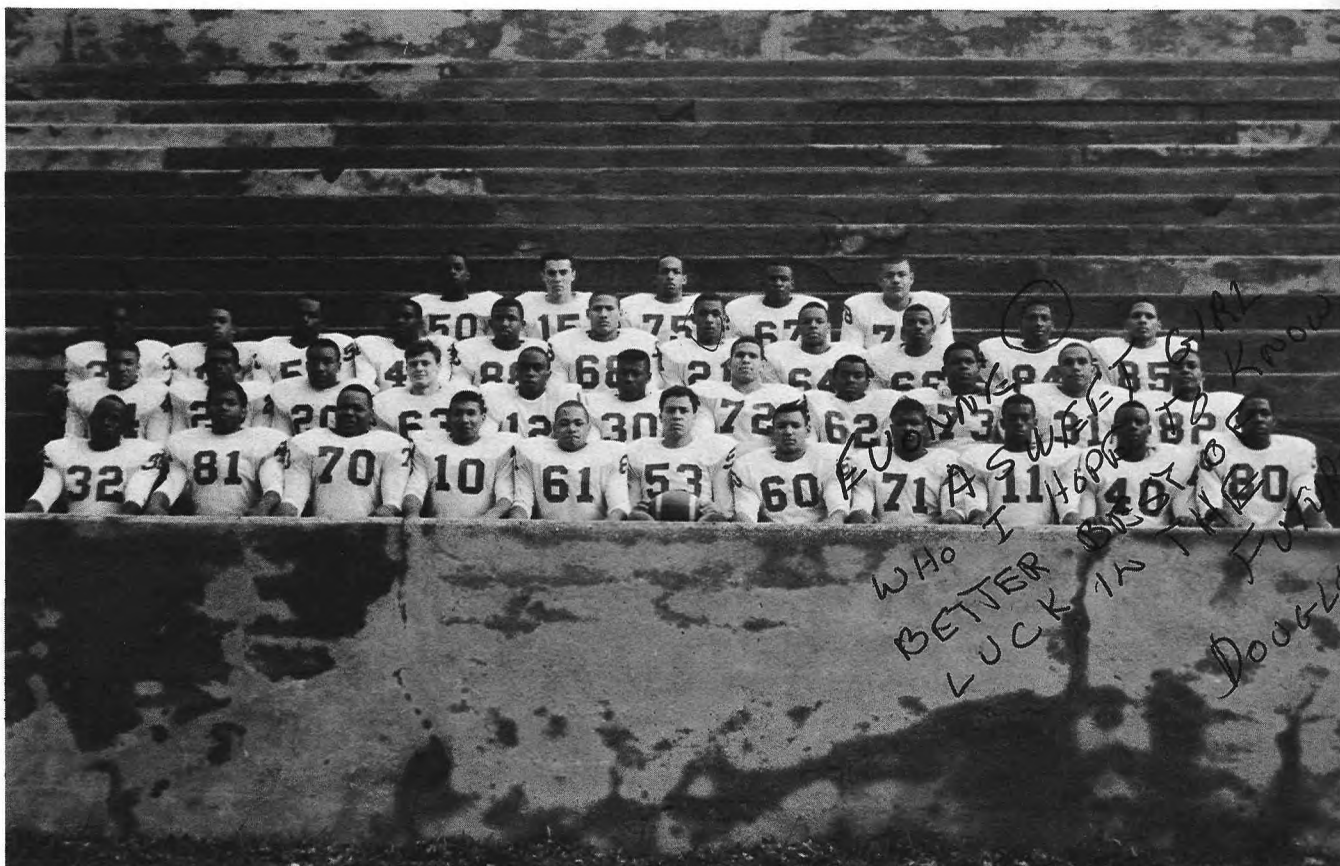

Stand up and cheer — for football, basketball, and baseball; cheer for all those who bring success and glory to the name of “Old East Orange.” Yell and scream for victory in Track, Soccer, and Tennis; applaud a winning play, but bear with a losing one, for no matter what the final result, someone has had to work hard just to try and bring victory to East Orange.

Before the cheering starts, however, many young men with dreams of glory go through the agony of conditioning and try-outs. Eagerly, but wearily, they check the locker room door to see who of their number will not return. The final cuts made, the team, for now it is a team rather than a group of young men, goes through the repetition of practice, till for every action there is an immediate and conditioned reaction. Then and only then is the team ready to face the cheering crowd.

Eight thousand people stand tensely waiting. Down on the field, twenty-two young men stand in two separate, but equal groups. They line up, then, in an explosion of action, the groups converge into a twisted mass of arms and legs. And from this mass a lone figure emerges, trailing others behind him. He races down field, all alone, until he crosses a magical line — Stand up and cheer.

The Panther gridmen break through the opposing linemen.

The season's opener against Belleville was a close victory as was the following game with Nutley. In their next two outings the Panthers defeated St. Benedict's and Irvington. Our only loss was to Montclair which was somewhat unexpected in that we were favored to win. The speedy Panthers were unable to break through the heavy Montclair line. This did not dampen the spirits of the team, however. They went on to finish out the season with wins over Phillipsburg, Essex Catholic, Columbia, and Barringer in the traditional Thanksgiving Day game.

It takes guts to play this game.

Mr. Acocella gives some last minute instructions.

Notable performers on this year's squad included Ralph Sturdivant who did a fine job as quarterback, Claude Perry and Horace Hooper, two excellent runners, and Eddie Donaldson, tackle.

The weeks of grinding workouts, the cold, dank nights of practice, and the many hours of planning proved fruitful this season. Harvesting an 8-1-0 record, the Panthers placed second in the Big Ten Conference. We congratulate Coach Dean for another outstanding season.

Each step brings him closer to a TD.

Basketball

Inexperience tumbled the Panthers into fourth place in the Big Ten Conference. Despite losing many heartbreakers, Coach Milner was never discouraged, and led his team to a winning season.

After a poor start, the team rebounded from its downfalls and became the spoiler. Hustle and determination carried the Red and Blue as they bested the best. The fine showing of the Junior Panthers prophesies the dominance of East Orange basketball in the years to come.

Ice Hockey

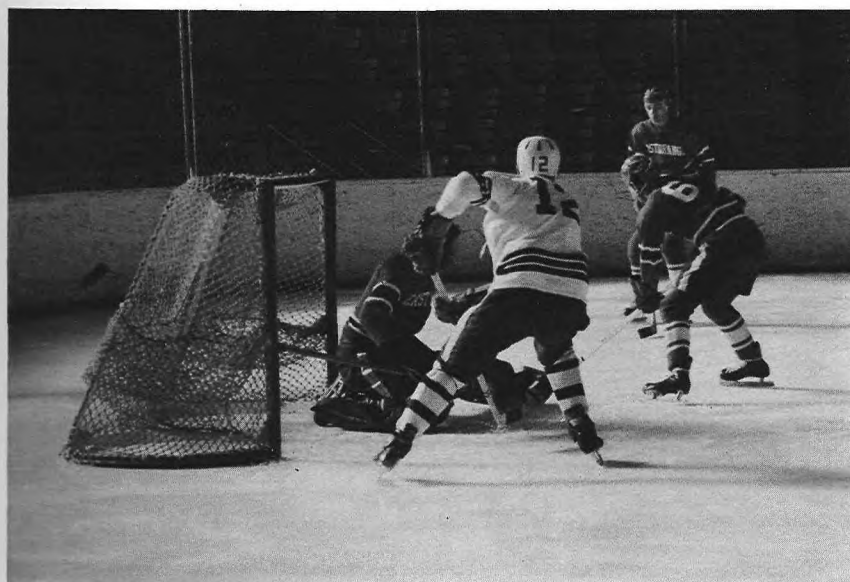

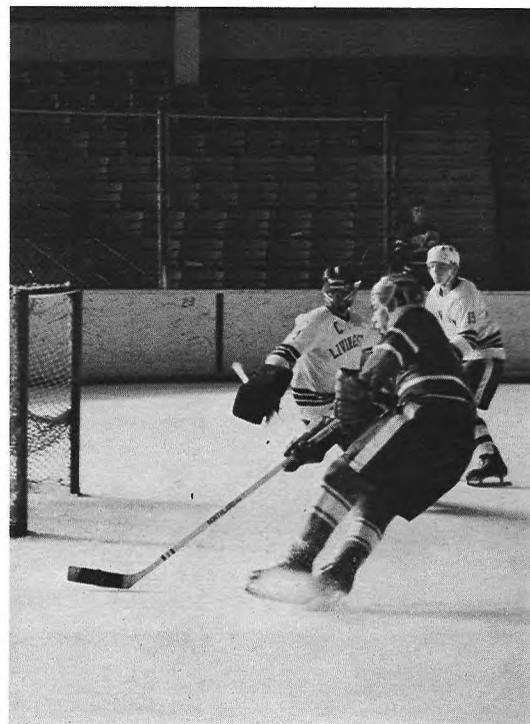

The first year of ice hockey since 1965 proved to be a very disappointing one. Coach DeSantis and the squad fell through the ice with an 0-18-2 record. Two games, one against West Orange and the other against Morristown, were won by forfeit. Despite a losing season, the team did gain much knowledge of the sport.

Scrambling for the puck.

Panthers put up a great defense at the goal.

Indoor Track

For Mr. Moss and the boys on the indoor track team this was a record breaking season. Vester Shack set a new meet record for the two mile run in the CYO indoor track meet with a time of 9:40.7. The mile relay team of Tom Hash, Larry Sheard, Keith Eley, and Eddie Thomas set a meet and state record with a time of 3:28.0. All told, the team accumulated over thirty medals and a trophy, breaking several school and state records.

Bowling

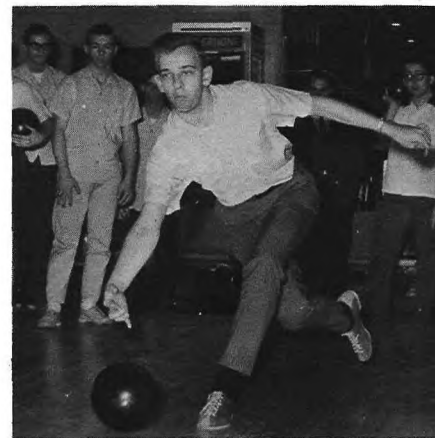

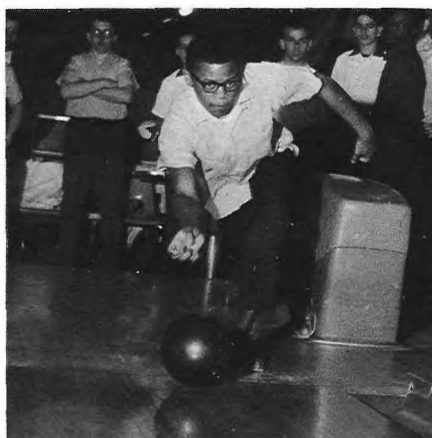

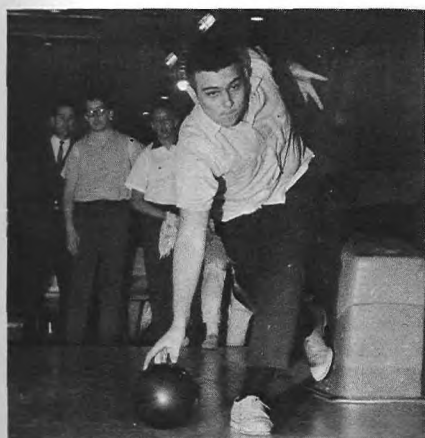

The East Orange High School bowling team was formed in 1964 by Mr. Edward Miller of the Driver Education Department. The goal of the team since then has been to improve the skills of its members and to get others who are interested in bowling to join the team. Competition is stiff and the team must be able to withstand pressures. We hope that bowling will eventually become a popular and successful sport at E.O.

Baseball

The national pastime has blossomed into a perennial power at East Orange High. Despite a poor start, the Panthers molded a winning surge late in the season to finish in second place in the Big Ten. Coach Wayne Von Stetton moved his team again into the State and Greater Newark Tournaments. Facing Clifford Scott in the Newark Tourney, the Panthers resoundingly trounced the crosstown rivals only to be defeated in the State Tourney against Union. In spite of the defeats, the season fared very well and added another winning year to the annals of E.O.

Track

The 1966 outdoor track season was a very successful one. Larry Askew set an Essex County Meet record in the long jump with a 22' 4" jump. Darryl Hall tied the 100-yard dash record at 10 seconds flat. The cooperative effort on the part of the team members placed them second in the Big Ten Relays and the Big Ten Track and Field Meet. The 880-yard relay team of Hooper, Bryant, Martin and Rodman tied the Orange relay record of 1:32.9 in the Long Branch Relays in which the Panthers placed third. In the Essex County Open Invitation, East Orange took eighth place.

Tennis

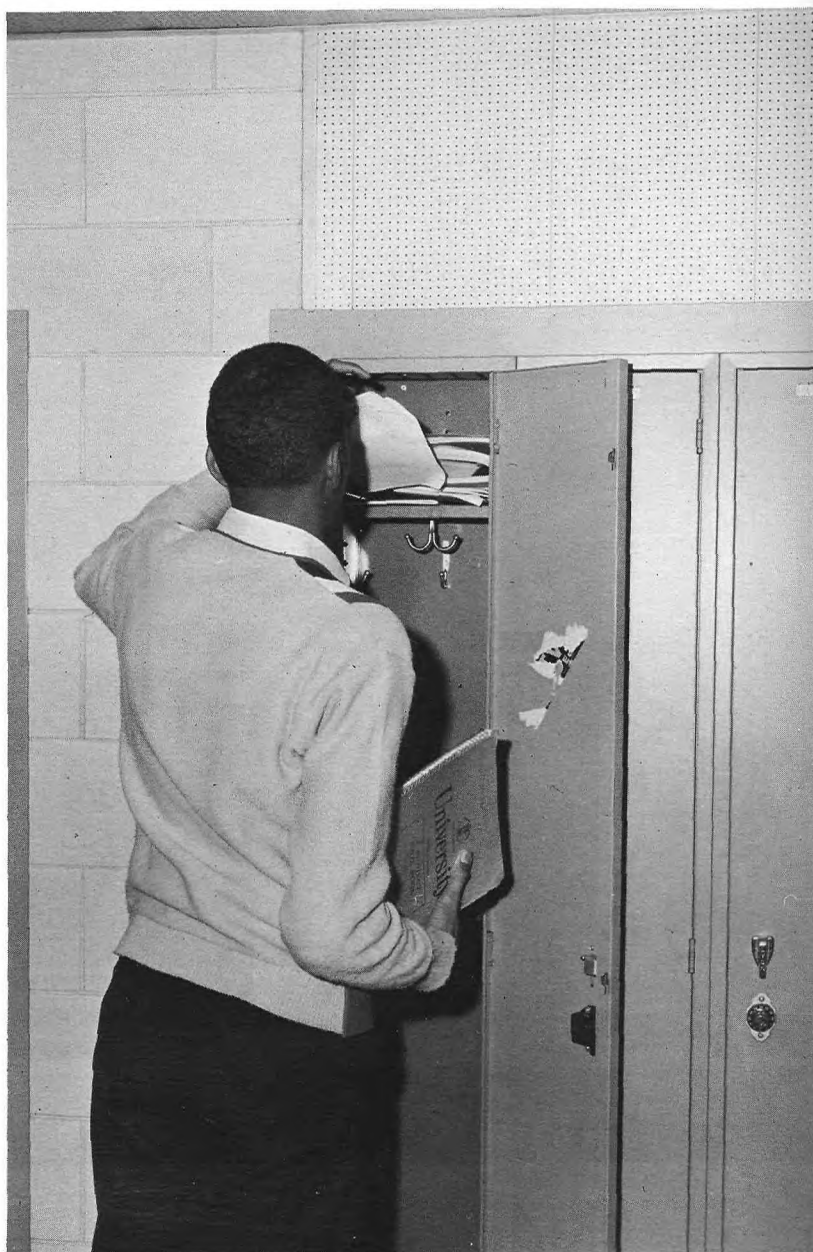

This year's season was one of disappointment for Coach Wear's team, ending with an overall record of 5 wins and 16 losses. The team's wins were over Essex Catholic, Irvington, Barringer, and Clifford Scott. To account for its many losses, one must consider the inexperience of the team. For several of the members, this was their first year out. Regardless of what the record may show, Mr. Wear and the boys did a fine job, and we look forward to better things from them next year.

The hidden body of an evergrowing, everswelling mass of humanity, people, or numbers on a computer—78540, report to 110 at 2:50—Struggling, to find a niche, a place in which to hide, away from the crushing horde. Sitting, watching as the microscopic eye examines each and every number — three seconds, only three seconds and then on to the next — only existing when called upon to do so, living only on command.

What, is this a light — follow it! Reaching, grasping, crawling through the mass of ticker tape, fighting, with draining strength, to reach the source. Being sucked back down into the clutching mass only to break free again, breathing the fresh air of victory. Looking around and seeing others struggling to free themselves from the grasp of the web and heaving a sigh of relief; you are not alone! Rejoice, world, a new individual is born!

CLASSES

Freshmen, amid all the bustling and confusion of the first few days, there emerges a gradual understanding of the fact that this school will be yours for the next four years. For four years it will be up to you to create a school which is worthy of its name. You will make the decisions, right or wrong, which will shape the future of East Orange High School. What you personally do or say may have a great effect on the way the world will view us, so speak carefully and act only after serious thought as to what you're doing, and why you're doing it.

Act with care in planning your program, for your personal future may depend on it. Choices which you make now may well determine what happens to you upon graduation. What you do now, in class and out of class, can not be taken back. Your every move, every thought is recorded so that someone, many years hence, can look at you and say, yes, or no.

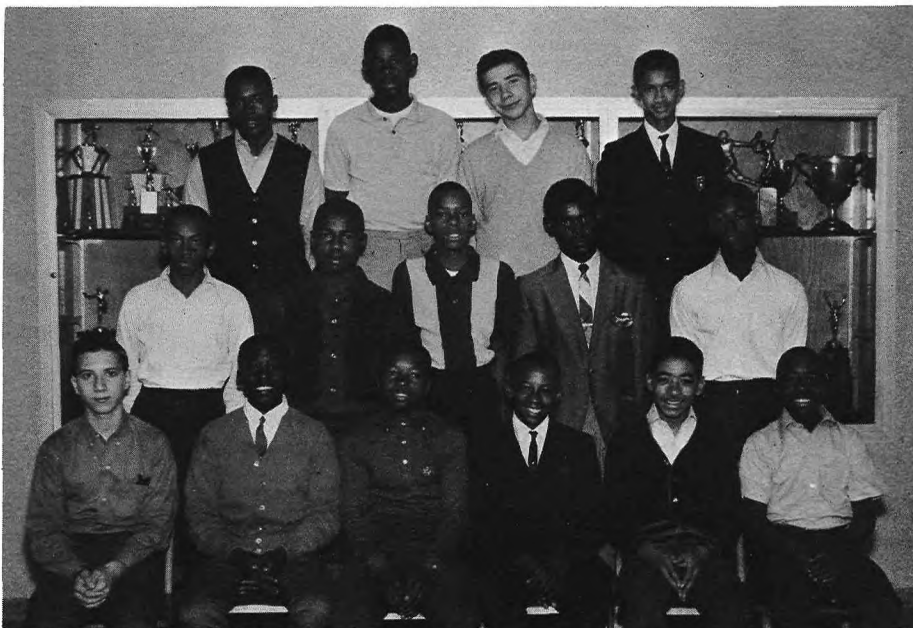

There is so much to do, so much to hope for, all depending upon how you pass through these first few days. If only you could see where thoughtlessness leads. Don't get lost, Freshmen, amid the bustling and confusion of those first few days, for once you do, it's a long hard road back to living.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

Half way to their goal, last year's novices start their second trip, hoping to make this a prosperous one.

By the beginning of this year, the students have become acquainted with the high school and its environment. School spirit has developed, and the students consider carefully which clubs and extracurricular activities they would like to join.

The student discovers Shakespeare's world; reading Romeo and Juliet and The Merchant of Venice. He also reads Silas Marner, along with Johnny Tremain, and becomes acquainted with short stories.

In Biology, the student learns about the evolvement of life on earth. While learning all these facts, the student is given a chance to experiment with hydra, paramecium, and planaria, after which he goes through the thrills of dissecting frogs, crayfish and worms.

It is during this year that the conscientious student starts formulating in his mind a future career. He begins to look at pamphlets from different colleges, weighing them as to what career he would like to pursue. His ideals, however, are out of his reach for the moment; it is for these that he strives forward, hoping that he can soon make them materialize.

JUNIOR CLASS

This is the time when the tempest starts to brew: college plans and entrance examinations, class elections, class ranks, Honor Society candidates. In the midst of this turbulence, each junior passes through the most important year of his high school career.

At the beginning of the junior year, the National Honor Society inducts those students who have done exceptionally well in their first two years. By this time, the students start worrying about college plans and admissions. They take the PSAT, followed by the National Merit Test and the SAT, which gives them an idea of where they stand so that they are able to meet the requirements for the college of their choice.

In spring comes the time for the Prom, and preparations begin as early as February in order to make this Prom better than any in the past.

It is at this period of the school term that the Student Council elections take place. The class selects its future leaders, anticipating a prosperous year ahead. Now success awaits—it will be in the hands of those who pursue it.

SENIORS

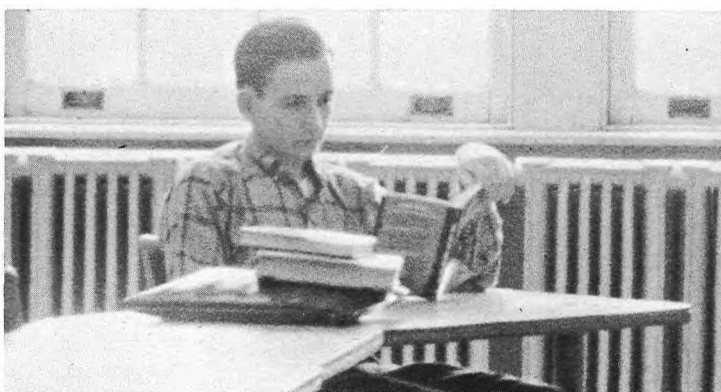

The Climax: The end of four years of living with a second self.

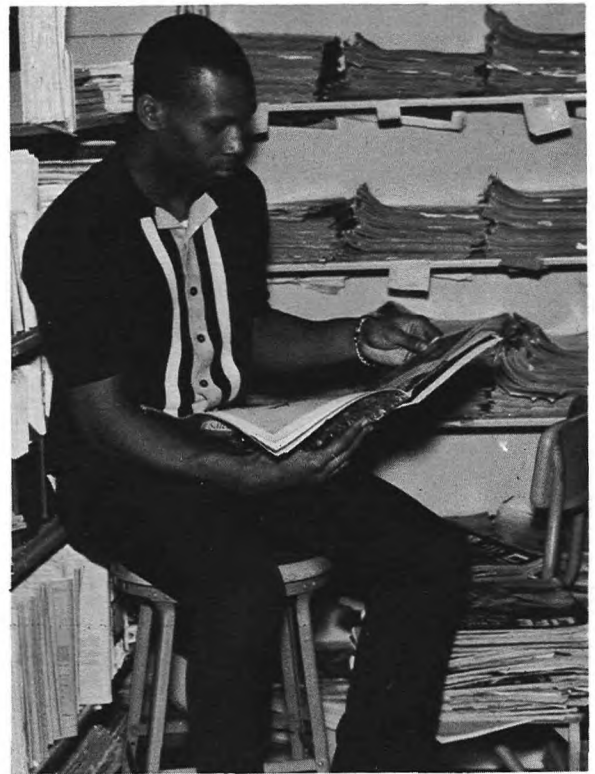

Four years, one hundred eighty days per year, six and one-half hours a day, Algebra, English, French, Chemistry, History . . . All have been experienced, all have been passed, all are gone. Times enjoyed are now only memories. The meetings, the talks, the jobs — eight to eight-thirty — working, writing, planning — three to five — the parties, the plays, the dance, the Prom — now to infinity.

Years pass and minds look back, trying to catch a thread of what was or what might have been. Time passes all too quickly for those who care, but memories, treasures of the past, recall the times of youth. Though the journey may be long, and the road sometimes rocky, there will always be those things which will support us in our need.

A New Start: The beginning of a lifetime of living with a second self.

The Senior Year means many things, be it Chemistry or decorating a Christmas Tree.

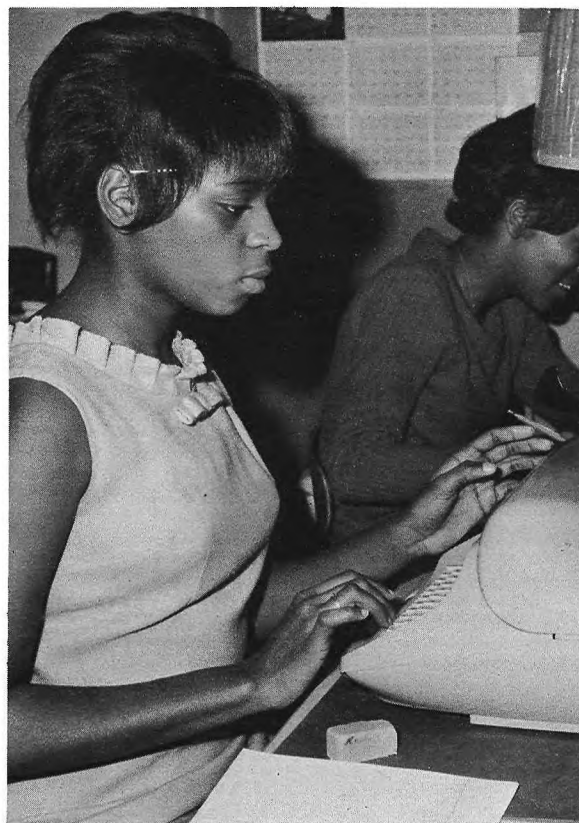

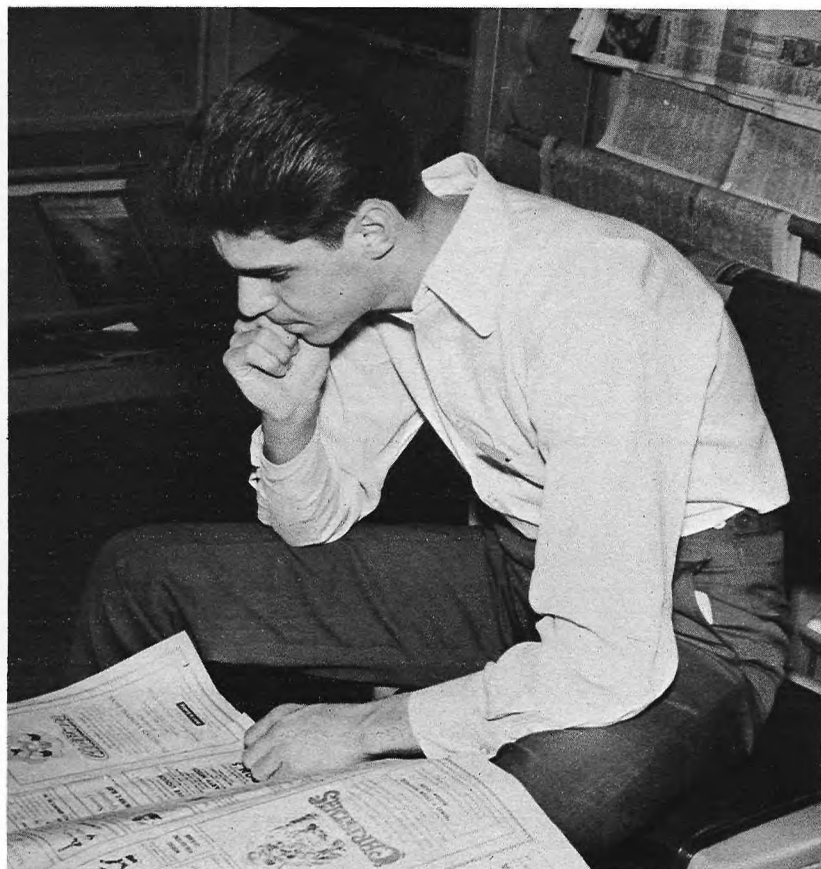

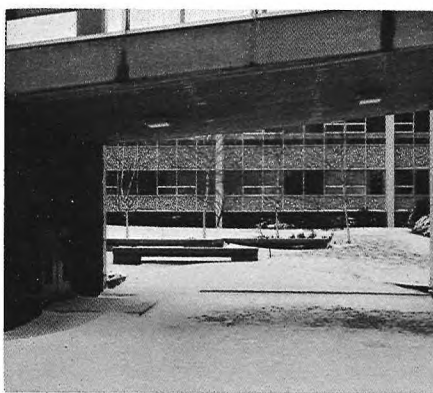

It's a constantly shifting sequence of extremes, from the peacefulness of the first show, to the buzz of activity in the cafeteria.

People always say that the final year is the easiest, but things have never happened quicker, nor has time ever seemed more precious, as the end draws near. Free time becomes a treasure, hardly to be scoffed at. Despite the fact that everything happens so quickly, impatience soon sets in. Time begins to drag; soon you want to get out so much it hurts.

Come June, a feeling of desperation arises, as you become aware, for the first time, that the wait is finally over. All that you could have done, should have done, or wanted to do passes before you. Rather than satisfaction, you feel sadness that you're leaving after four long years. And when, at last, graduation is finally over, the only thought that enters your mind is "Where has it all gone?"

To the Leaders of the Leaders

Diane Williams — President

Alexis Terrell — Vice President

The Senior year includes many things which make it different from all other previous years. There are things to be done which require clear thinking on the part of those who lead. The ability to visualize what is to come is important, but not so important as the ability to adjust to minor day to day crises and tediums. The ability to be firm in monetary matters is a rough job, but not quite so rough as the handling of the many personalities involved in the creation of a prom.

Those who have had the strength and ability to lead the leaders as successfully as has been done, deserve a special thanks from the Senior Class. That is, then, what this is for, a tribute to the Senior Class Officers.

Althea Long — Treasurer

Ruth Griffith — Secretary

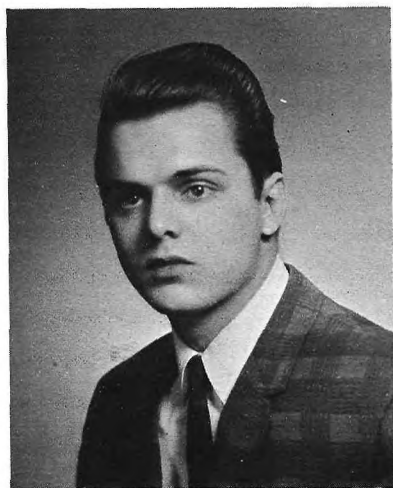

The Senior Dance helped to raise funds for the Prom.

“EARTH, RECEIVE AN HONOURED GUEST”

On the morning of April 17, Mrs. Ruth Burwell died in childbirth. Mrs. Burwell had been the librarian here since September, 1965; previously she had been the branch librarian of the Elmwood Branch of the East Orange Public Library. She is survived by her husband, Guidance Department head Mr. Melvin J. Burwell, a daughter, Dawn, and a newly born son, Todd Raymond.

Mrs. Burwell was one of those rare people whose character was dominated by an overwhelming abundance of kindness which she was continually bestowing upon those around her. Nothing was ever too much for her to do, nor was there ever a loss of her wonderful sense of humor while she was doing it. This, coupled with a bubbling zest for living, produced as admirable an individual as one could ever hope to know. Thus she left her mark on East Orange High School.

On February 14, 1967, East Orange High School suffered a tremendous loss, with the death of Mr. A. Walter Bodenschatz. The shocking suddenness of his passing made it all the more tragic for those of us who knew and admired him as a teacher, associate, and friend.

Outside of teaching, Mr. Bodenschatz is best remembered for his avid interest in drama. He participated in many school plays, and had been one of the leaders of the East Orange Little Theatre, appearing in many of their productions. In school, he taught English with a flair that reflected his own love for literature, and a furious thirst for knowledge in general.

Above all other things, perhaps, Mr. Bodenschatz will be remembered for his wit, which was often cutting, but always brilliant in its language and originality. It was a learned wit, bred of a nimble mind and capable of great depths of both pointedness and understanding.

Many years will pass before the image of Mr. Bodenschatz, at the lectern will fade from our memories, but even time won't make his loss any less painful, for the world always needs men with intelligence, understanding, and wit.

Acknowledgments

The 1967 Syllabus is, for better or worse, the sum total of many fine individual efforts. We of the Syllabus Board wish to thank the following people for their contributions in behalf of the book.

Mr. Edward R. Bathmann of Rae Publishing Company for his invaluable assistance in the fine art of yearbook production.

Lorstan Thomas Studios for their fine Photographic work.

Phyllis Gilmore and June Meggett for typing and retyping the reams of copy which appear in this book.

Kathy Bowser, Brenda Caesar, Victoria Chin, Edward Fleming, Oswaldo Lecuona, Elaine Stevens, and Linda White for unequalled editorial help before, betwixt, and between deadlines.

Enrique Alonso for his longevity in both patience and hours spent working, as well as fine talent for layouts, without whom this book would not have been possible.

Mr. Martin Mellinger, Business Advisor, for his advice on the Stock Market.

Mr. Howard Wolverton, Jr., Editorial Advisor, for the 1967 Syllabus.

The members of the Syllabus Board are listed in the Senior Directory.

CLOSING

Time passes, seconds into minutes, minutes into hours, ad infinitum. With time, our lives pass unbearably slow, and then, all too painfully fast. And as we grow aware of our fleeing youth, we reach out to touch a dream, our hopes and ambitions, but through time, this dream has been tempered so that where there was once an overwhelming desire, there is now only emptiness.

Our dreams are the visage of our lost youth, for when we have a goal to achieve, life takes on an aura of urgency, a vigor and excitement that we only have during youth. But as our purpose fades, so do our dreams, and without a goal our existence becomes repetition, a never ending monotony of time, place, and activity. We pass, from lack of interest, into the shapeless mass of mediocrity and conformity, having only a few lost memories to look back on.

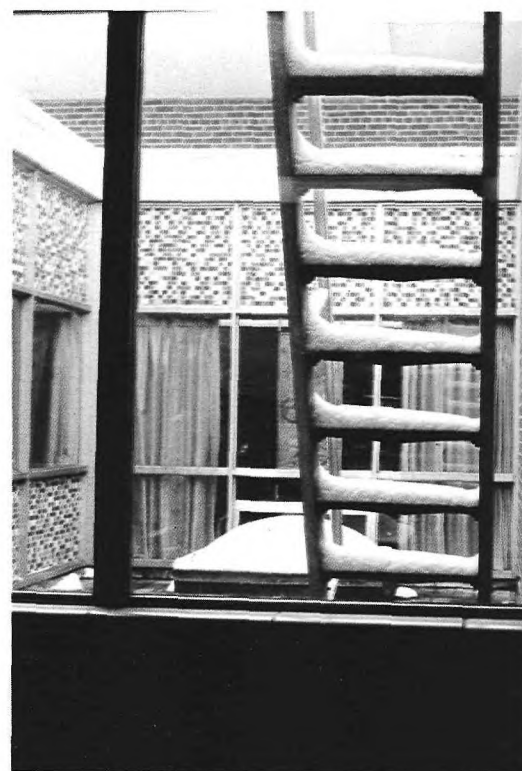

How can this be changed? Are our lives to degenerate into tedium, leaving only stale memories? Is there no way to perpetuate our dreams?

No, we can never live in perpetual youth, for mind, body, and spirit all advance on different planes. Sadly enough, what we want to do is not always what we are capable of doing. Yet, the mere fact that we want to do something is incentive enough to make us try even harder to do it, or something else in its place. It is this incentive which makes us want to move on, to advance, to explore all that is around us; it is this incentive which makes us want to live.

Everyday life starts anew. There are things to be seen, things to be done. Little things like walking in the coolness of a summer evening, or talking to someone who means a lot to you. Simple things such as stepping outside after a spring rain, and stopping to enjoy the freshness of the air, or merely the sweetness of the first bite of a juicy apple. After all, who can deny the pleasure of the sky above and the earth beneath your feet? And with life's daily renewal we find new friends and new ideas, things which may have profound effects on us. Each day we have the opportunity to make life worth living, but this chance will be wasted if we are not aware of the little things which are happening around us, for awareness is the only way of fulfilling our dreams.

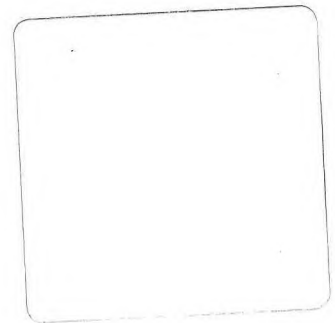

The future is no more than the sum total of our experiences; in a world full of so many wonderful and different things, the blame can only be personal if we fail. Time is too precious a thing to waste, for once it's gone we have only memories of what was, and what might have been. But if we live life to the fullest, the memories will be worthwhile and the dream fulfilled. The chance is there, all that remains is for us to take advantage of it.

To everything there is a season and a time to every purpose: a time to dream, and a time to do; a time to build, and a time to break down; a time to act, and a time to wait; a time to work, and a time to play; a time to learn, and a time to teach; a time to find, and a time to lose; a time to laugh, and a time to cry; a time for joy, and a time for sorrow; a time to be silent, and a time to speak; a time to love, and a time to be loved; a time to save, and a time to destroy; a time to fight, and a time to make peace; a time to be proud, and a time to be humble; a time to end a way of life, and a time to start life anew.
