Robert J. Miller

1912-1964

A man's life is but a fleeting moment measured in time. However brief life be, it is given to all of us to make that moment of life a worthy testimony of man's nobility. Our colleagues Robert Miller and Howard Tracy fulfilled that role.

We mourn their death because when a man of their stature dies, a part of each of us dies also. We take solace, however, in knowing that their good works continue to live on in the countless number of students, now grown men and women, who today function as worthy citizens. We know that these students are so much the better for having come under their guidance and influence.

1965-

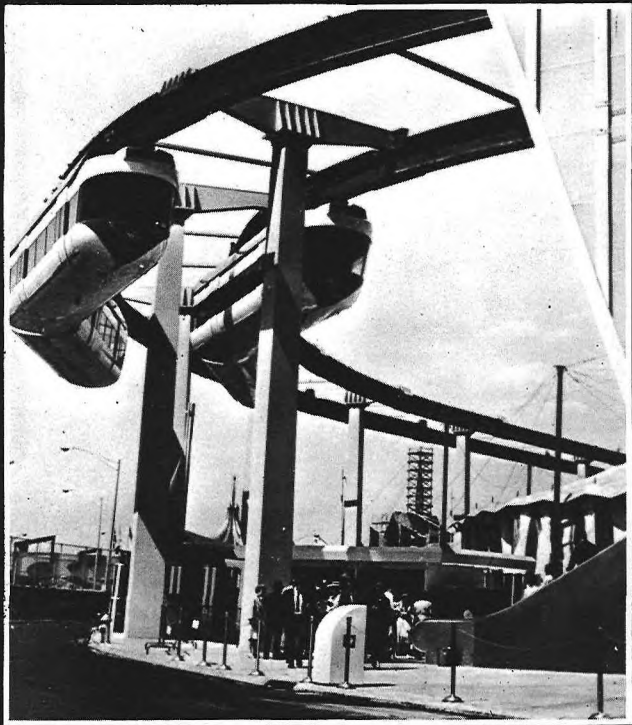

Howard C. Tracy

1906-1964

In our sadness, we must remember that it is through the wisdom of God that these two distinguished men have been removed from our midst. And we have the consoling words of Michel de Montaigne: "There is nothing as beautiful and just, as to play the man well and fitly, nor any knowledge so arduous as to know how to live this life well and naturally."

We must be content in the assurance that Robert J. Miller and Howard C. Tracy lived their lives in just that way.

Education for us consists of two parts: actual experience and formal study. The 1964-65 New York World's Fair was an experience few of us missed. Visits to the Fair have provided many with specific facts in various fields. More important, however, many of us have gained a better understanding of the world and its people.

Clifford Scott High School has provided the opportunity for formal study. This training which we have gone through is part of the accepted educational program of today. But Scott has been more than classroom study. It has been a many-faceted experience, from competition in athletics to stage presentations to formal social events, as well as day-to-day group life. Our years in high school have given us much of the basic education upon which we will build our lives.

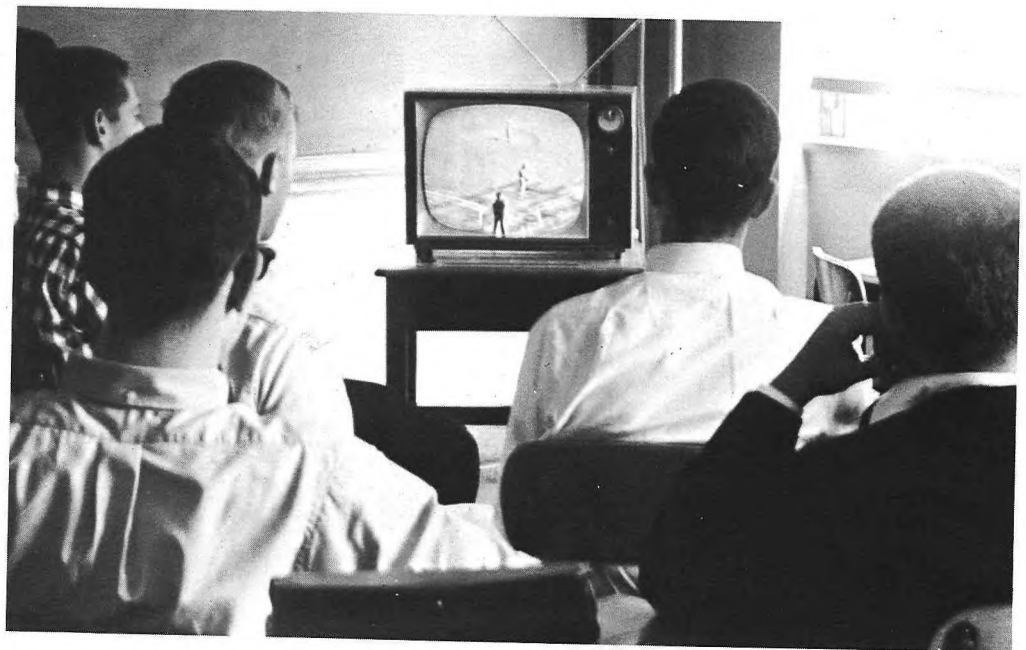

Both the World's Fair and Scott High School are educational experiences which have added to our knowledge of ourselves and of the world we live in. And from each we have gained a better Understanding, upon which we must base our hopes for Peace.

The World's Fair promotes Peace through Understanding by hosting numerous sporting events. These events bring together in a spirit of mutual respect athletes from all over the world.

Here at Scott athletics play an important role in student life. A wide range of varsity sports provides students with diverse athletic abilities the opportunity to participate in interscholastic competition. In these events, it is not only winning that is important, but also the acquiring of sportsmanlike attitudes among all the competitors.

S P O R T S

The World's Fair exhibits many of man's achievements, from scientific and industrial to cultural. All phases of man's life, his art and music as well as his scientific development, must be understood; only then can this understanding promote peace.

Clifford Scott as well strives to develop all aspects of the individual: Here activities ranging from student government to music to publications are offered to help the student broaden his scope of learning.

FOOTBALL

Co-captains Dave Williams and Jim McHugh; Coach Walt Williams.

The 1964 football team, under Coach Walter Williams' guidance, finished the season with a satisfactory 4-4 record. Highlights of the season were the opening game victory over Group IV Morris Hills and Joe Crann's field goal in Scott's 16-6 triumph over Verona. Junior quarterback Mike Almeida was named to the Group II All-State Team. The return of the entire backfield and a group of fine linemen make Scott's future prospects bright.

Scott's 1964 soccer team, compiling the best record in the school's history, 9-5-3, reached the semifinals of the state tournament. The high point of the season was the traditional "Mud Classic" against East Orange. The game ended in a 1-1 tie after Scott hadled for more than three quarters. This year, Bob Holt set a new school scoring record with 17 goals, and Andy Lemer gained honorable mention on the All-State team.

Scott's tall, experienced cagers ended the 1964-65 regular season with an outstanding 18-2 record. Coach Ed Lyons' team also added a first-round victory in the Essex County Tournament before bowing to East Orange in the quarter-finals. Highlights of the season were triumphs over Roselle Park, New Providence, and arch-rival Mountain, as well as three victories over Valley. Tom Schwester led the team in scoring with Cliff Korte second as the Scotties averaged 69.3 points per game and held its opponents to 47 points per game. These statistics, coupled with its fine record, enabled the team to enter the State Tournament as one of the favorites in Group II, thus continuing the tradition of fine basketball at Scott.

Tom Schwester scores despite the efforts of three Highland Park players.

The Girls' Sports Program includes hockey, soccer, volleyball, basketball, badminton, softball, and tennis, as well as several modern dance groups. Each sport is held for a period of six to eight weeks, and chevrons are awarded to those girls who attend regularly. The teams that are organized play among themselves, as well as with other schools. All interested girls are eligible to play. The modern dance groups, on the other hand, are organized on a competitive basis with the three groups being Performing, Concert, and Orchesis. FACULTY

A visit to the World's Fair is a valuable learning experience. The spectator, exposed to exhibits from all corners of the earth, becomes better acquainted with the world, its peoples, and its problems.

Our major learning experience, however, is through books and discussions in the classroom. Here the important factor is the one who guides, who stimulates, who supervises — who charts the way and keeps the class on course. So we salute our navigators — the faculty of Clifford J. Scott.

CLASSES

The World's Fair attests to the diversity of the world's cultures. From the Flamenco dancers at the Spanish Pavilion, to the banjo band at the Mississippi River Showboat, to the Danish silversmiths, this diversity is evidenced. Despite this diversity people come together and, by their personal contacts as well as their official participation, learn to understand themselves and others better.

Personal as well as classroom relations are also part of the learning process at Clifford J. Scott. Here, we students, from many backgrounds and with varying interests and abilities, come together to learn. Through our educational experiences, we come to understand better ourselves and the world we live in.

SENIORS

The World's Fair strives to provide the visitor with a fuller, more intimate understanding of our world and its peoples. On display are over seventy nations' contributions to man's past achievements and his future hopes. The individual who witnesses this stirring display of universal cooperation is made more fully aware of his own responsibility as a citizen of our world community to understand and respect his fellow men.

The educational experience we seniors have received at Clifford Scott High School has prepared us to assume this responsibility. Our schooling, both academic and extracurricular, has provided us the initial impetus in our search for understanding. Now, as we face the future, we are ready and willing to meet the challenges that lie ahead.

CLASS ADVISERS
Mr. Pollock, Mrs. Krueger

TO THE CLASS OF 1965

During your years with us we have tried to instill within you a respect for the values that our culture honors. Many of these values are learned best through experience, which permits not only the personal growth and satisfaction that comes with success, but also the bitterness and frustration of reverses. We hope that your experiences in our smaller world within these walls will enable you to take your place and contribute your particular talents to what we all hope will truly become "The Great Society."

Our eternal good wishes are with you in all your pursuits.

EVOLUTION OF A SENIOR

A FRESHMAN THINKS:

Graduation is far away.

I've got plenty of time ahead of me, I'll take it easy now.

The seniors are like lords.

I don't understand this language.

I do my homework.

Clifford Scott is a great place to go to school.

Why can't we get rid of this car? It's a year old already.

Homeroom is a fine place to begin the day.

A paradox is two shipping wharfs.

I read books and do book reports.

I attend all club meetings.

Dad, will you drive me to school this morning?

A SOPHOMORE THINKS:

Graduation is far away.

I've got time ahead of me, I'll take it easy.

The seniors are like lords.

It may be coming to me little by little.

I copy homework.

Life at Clifford Scott is tops.

Why can't we get rid of this car? It's two years old already.

Homeroom is a fine place to socialize in.

A paradox is a geometrical figure.

I scan books and do book reports.

I attend most club meetings.

Dad, will you drive me to school this morning?

A JUNIOR THINKS:

Graduation is getting close.

There's time to make an impression next year.

The seniors are like lords.

Next year I might speak it fluently.

I have my friends make carbons of homework.

Clifford Scott is ideally located.

Why can't we get rid of this car? It's three years old already.

Homeroom is a fine place to study for tests.

A paradox is a paragon misspelled.

I read book jackets and do book reports.

I attend some club meetings.

Dad, can I have the car this morning?

A SENIOR THINKS:

Graduation is far away.

I've worked hard these past years and it doesn't count anymore, I'll take it easy.

The seniors are lords.

I should have taken Spanish.

Homework?

I want to go to college 600 miles from here.

Frank, come out and see my new '51 Ford.

Homeroom is a fine place not to come to in the morning.

A paradox is a good word to know for the College Boards.

I don't read books and do book reports.

I attend the meetings for Tartan pictures.

Dad, you can have the car this morning.
